FEAR RAID ON THAW JAIL

"Evelyn Has Brought Harry Nothing But Misery and Shame," Says Dorothy Dix

Since the day he married her, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has brought Harry Thaw nothing but misery and shame. She stained his hands with blood. She has cost him his liberty and most of his fortune, yet he loves her still.—Dorothy Dix on the Thaw case. (Full story on Page 3.)

SHERIFF WARNED OF PLOT

Premier Cautions Sherbrooke Jail Officials to be Prepared for Attack.

ARMED GUARDS READY

SHERBROOKE, P. K., Aug. 23.—The high Canadian authorities took prompt measures today to check a jail raid which was reported to be brewing in the interest of Harry K. Thaw.

Sir Louis Gouin, Premier of the Province of Quebec, received warning of such a raid. He immediately telegraphed Sheriff Aylmer of St. Francis County to know, in the sheriff's opinion, the staff of guards at Sherbrooke jail is strong enough to repel a raid.

This telegram to the sheriff was the first intimation that the Premier of the Province knew of the reported raid plans. It showed how closely the Dominion and Province authorities are following every move, physical as well as legal, in the case of this notorious man from an American lunatic asylum.

Sheriff Aylmer telegraphed back that he had no fears but what his jail guard is ample to hold the place against any attack.

But the sheriff did add, significantly, that THE NEXT TIME THE PRISONER IS TAKEN TO COURT AN ARMED GUARD WILL BE ORDERED OUT.

May Appeal to King George.

Thaw is planning an appeal direct to King George of England, as well as an appeal to President Wilson, according to report today. He wishes to ask the King for royal protection while he is in the Dominion.

Realizing that deportation awaits their clients, the Thaw lawyers today decided to drop the habeas corpus proceedings, if Thaw would consent. H. L. Fraser and W. K. McKeown, two of Thaw's counsellors, visited the jail and told the

NEW HAVEN ASKS BOND PERMIT

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad today asked the Massachusetts Public Service Commission for authority to issue, on or before October 15, the $67,552,600 convertible 6 per cent. debentures as "convertible debentures of 1913."

Should the commission refuse to grant the authority the only alternative would be receivership proceedings, according to one of the directors who opposed the issue at yesterday's stormy meeting in New Haven, Ct.

Asked today if Vice-President Timothy E. Byrnes would be made president of the New England Steamship Company, President Howard Elliott said:

"The matter of presidencies of the New England Steamship, Connecticut and Rhode Island Companies was not discussed. That will be attended to after I become president. Further action regarding segregation of properties must wait until organization of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine roads is worked out in greater detail.

In addition to paying off the notes of the company which are due, the New Haven says it plans to buy eighty-five locomotives, three hundred steel cars and two electric locomotives. Part of the proceeds of the loan will be used for working capital.

Mrs. Pankhurst Denies Desertion

Merely Seeks Health, She Says, in Luxurious Surroundings.

TROUVILLE, France, Aug. 23.—"That is a libel," cried Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst when she today heard of a rumor current in London that she had deserted the suffrage cause.

"I am going back when I regain my health and will again lead the forces of militancy," said she.

Mrs. Pankhurst, who has spent most of the past three years in jails fighting against forcible feeding, is living at the height of luxury here. Her suite in the Hotel Des Rocher Noires costs $20 a day. She is accompanied by Mrs. Doggett of Chicago, a rich woman who is interested in suffrage. Mrs. Doggett has contributed $10,000 to the cause in England.

Kaiser Climbs on the "Water Wagon"

But He Doesn't Force His Drink, Lemonade, on Guests.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—The Kaiser has joined the ranks of teetotallers. He has forsworn the Fatherland's famous beer and cut out its choicest wines. His favorite drink is now lemonade with a dash of orange juice, but he does not force this "Bryanade" on his guests, to whom the usual wines are served.

Some time ago the Kaiser demanded the latest alcoholic statistics as to suicides, accidents and crimes which resulted from immoderate drinking. After a study of these statistics he experimented on himself and found that even small quantities of liquor lessened his energy and capacity for work, whereupon with characteristic impulsiveness he cut out alcohol entirely.

Lynn Woman Seeks Missing Husband

Mrs. Ida May Stein of No. 16 South Common street, Lynn, has appealed to the AMERICAN to locate her husband, Lewis Stein, who disappeared August 4. He left to go to work in the Jacobs Shoe Company, where he was employed as a laster. Mrs. Stein has been ill since her husband went away.

Stein is thirty-five years old, medium height, clean shaven, and has an impediment in his speech. He has two gold teeth.

Reverse $406,175 Fessenden Verdict

After a court battle lasting for several years, Professor Reginald A. Fessenden, the inventor of many electrical devices, today heard Judges Brown and Hale in the United States Court of Appeals reverse the $406,175 verdict awarded the inventor by a United States District Court jury against the National Electric Signaling Company and others. Judge Aldrich dissented from the opinion of the other two judges.

Howard Elliott to Live in New Haven

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 23.—It was announced today that Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven road, succeeding president C. S. Mellen, would make his home in this city. He has engaged carters at the Hotel Taft for himself and family, commencing September 1. It was formerly announced that he would live in Boston.

"DUKE" IS FERNCROFT SPOTTER

The thrilling story of how "Duke d'Amuscio" plaied detective for the Waites and Wing Society at the Ferncroft Inn before the society's raid there last night came out today, and North Shore people shivered in their shoes at thought of what he might reveal. This duke had engrossed cards and was almost certified.

The Duke was really a Watch and Ward man, and he went to the Inn with a "Western mining engineer" and a "Western Senator."

They mingled with the gay guests there—danced the turkey trot and the tango, drank Rhine wine and seltzer—and other things, and audibly longed for a chance at gaming.

They blushed at some of the things they saw there, and the Duke was chary of detailing all these things today.

Their desire for a chance at the tables was eventually gratified. It cost the Duke $40 one night and $50 the next. He spent over a hundred dollars in all during his visit.

But "I should worry," he said today. "I was rubbing shoulders with the best people in the Back Bay—some of them. I danced with them and drank with them and gossiped with them. They were completely fooled."

Sometimes these people would ask innocently questions about Italy. Then one of the Duke's companions would call him on a telephone.

The three men had carefully rehearsed their parts before they ventured to the inn. They gathered complete evidence.

Washington Denies Lind Death Rumor

Said to Have Been Stock Market Scheme.

Shortly before noon today a rumor was sent broadcast throughout the country that John Lind, United States special envoy to Mexico, had been assassinated in Mexico City. The report spread like wildfire. Messages and telephone calls of all description were being buried back and forth among the various newspaper headquarters.

A message from the State Department at Washington promptly set at rest the rumor by denying that anything of the kind had taken place. Later it was said that the rumor was started for stock market purposes.

Seek Pied Piper for Mrs. Belmont's Home

Marble House in Newport Overrun with Rats.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—There's a "swell job"—as they say—for a Pied Piper at Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's famous Marble House.

Marble House is overrun with rats. Why Mrs. Belmont's suffragette establishment should be picked out as a rat rendezvous is not explained, unless the rodents wish to put Mrs. Belmont's suffrage fibre to the last, stern test of feminine will. Mrs. Belmont has gone to Europe, leaving the servants with the rats.

Among the futile remedies tried so far on the plague of rats are:

proposition before Thaw. He said he would take the matter under consideration and give a definite answer in good time.

Deportation Is Inevitable.

The government has decided to deport Thaw either to Vermont or New Hampshire, probably on Wednesday or Thursday of next week.

A conference of Thaw's principal relatives was called in New York today to plan an escape for the prisoner out of the hands of the law, aboard a private yacht, down to Buenos Ayres and thence over to Germany.

This New York meeting was arranged by Oscar Von Hoffmann, a wealthy cousin of Thaw's former days, who came here Wednesday, saw the prisoner, then left hurriedly for New York early today after dispatching telegraphic summons ahead for the family council.

Von Hoffmann's arrangements called for a meeting at the Hotel Gotham in New York of Thaw's devoted mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw; his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lauder Carnegie and Hoffmann himself.

This is the strongest family combination that could be gathered for Thaw. His mother's unselfish love knows no limits. Mrs. Carnegie is Thaw's favorite sister, Margaret, known as his "Guardian Angel." Her husband, George Lauder Carnegie, fulfills every wish of his wife in regard to helping her unfortunate brother.

Clash Among Counsel.

Thaw's increasing nervousness, not to say unmanageability, is one reason for rushing these escape plans to final arrangement.

Another element has just come into the case, too, in the confusion among Thaw's Canadian counsel. It is a case of "Too Many Cooks," illegal ones in the first place, and a scarcity of responsible authority to whom the lawyers may look in the next.

The lawyers would like to know who is really in charge of Thaw's case, who will foot the bills and whom they are to consult pending Thaw's arraignment next Wednesday.

The escape plan which Oscar Von Hoffmann has devised is based on the assumption that Thaw will be released to the Canadian immigration officers and then turned back by them into the United States.

Ready with Cash Bail.

The moment Thaw is turned back into Vermont or New Hampshire, as it is expected, he will be arrested by the authorities of that State. A hearing will be demanded, with cash bail published in any amount for Thaw's appearance.

The next step in this scheme is to rush Thaw to the nearest seaport, have a fast yacht in waiting. Once on the high seas Thaw's plotters defy the world to stop him.

Oscar von Hoffman is an old friend of Thaw. His father is a big landed proprietor in the town of Culmbach, kingdom of Bavaria, Germany. Culmbach is a peaceful community of 6,000 industrious Germans.

The name of the town may mean more to the average American when he is informed that it is the home of Culmbacher beer, a heavy, dark Bavarian beer which is much affected by those who delay. The elder Von Hoffmann owns 3,500 acres in Culmbach. There is a big hunting preserve and plenty of other healthy out-door sport for Thaw. There are also plenty of obedient Bavarian peasants on the estate who will do Von Hoffmann's instant bidding and who will restrain Thaw in case any such control becomes necessary.

So desperate is Thaw's case felt to be by Von Hoffman and so confident is he that the plot will go through, that Von Hoffmann did not hesitate to speak freely of it to an AMERICAN reporter. He said:

The scheme is this: If Thaw is released by the Canadian government to the United States—as he undoubtedly will be from the way things are going—he will be turned back into New Hampshire or Vermont.

In the natural course of events Thaw will be immediately rearrested the moment he is on United States soil again.

He will demand a hearing. His lawyers will see that he is properly instructed. Bail can be furnished in any amount.

Here Von Hoffmann paused and seemed to be cogitating how he could best express himself without saying too much about a distant plot.

He resumed his narrative abruptly, saying:

Suppose Thaw is hustled by his friends to the nearest seaport on the New Hampshire or Maine coast. Let him be put aboard a private yacht, a fast one.

I expect to be with Thaw through this. My plan is to take him down to Buenos Ayres to get a good rest, several months if necessary.

Later, when Thaw wishes, we will charter a yacht and steam across the Atlantic to a German port. Probably our going would not be heralded and probably Thaw's entry into Germany would be accomplished with as little fuss as possible.

The main thing is to get Thaw into Germany. In the kingdom of Bavaria, in what is called the "Upper Franconia" district, there is the town of Kulmbach, my birthplace. There my father has his estate, some 3,500 acres. There is a big hunting preserve. Thaw could spend years there without annoyance. In case it should be necessary to prevent him from starting back to America—say I went on the estate will do as they are told.

Offers Ideal Refuge.

The place is ideal as a refuge for Thaw, and there is no reason why this plan cannot be carried out. I am on my way now to New York to meet Thaw's mother and his sister and brother-in-law. I have telegrammed them to meet me at the Hotel Gotham.

Von Hoffmann sent an innocently worded telegram, in arranging for the New York conference. It was addressed to George Lauder Carnegie at the Hotel Gotham and read about as follows:

"VERY GRATIFYING NEWS FOR FAMILY. I LVE MRS. MARY COPLEY THAW AND MRS. CARNEGIE MEET ME WITH YOU AT HOTEL GOTHAM TODAY. — VON HOFFMANN."

Mercy Unknown to Thaw's Foes, Declares Dr. Evans, Alienist

I left Mr. Thaw physically as strong as he was when I last saw him at Matteawan. He is mentally as calm and firm as I would expect any normal individual to be, subjected to a continuous strain such as he has been.

He is surrounded by able counsel, who will, I believe, protect his interest. If the people who are knowingly or unknowingly persecuting him do not succeed in bringing about nervous prostration or mental breakdown, it will not be because they have not used every available force and means within their reach.

Mercy, the milk of human kindness, and the fellowship of man find no place in the hearts of these people who have been hounding this man who has been tried and found "Not Guilty" in the sight of the law.—Dr. Britton D. Evans.

Von Hoffman also discussed some side features of the Thaw case, saying:

If Thaw is released in Canada and has a possible chance he intends to give a banquet to all his friends in Sherbrooke. He will spend $10,000 on this feast.

Thaw will never go back to New York State. His relatives and friends are not only determined about this, but they are most confident that it will not be necessary.

So far as "Educated" Roger Thompson, the chauffeur, is concerned, he will be looked out for, never fear. There is no need of Thompson getting grouchy. He will be mighty well taken care of. He isn't getting hurt any even if he is in jail a few days. They say "Misery loves company." Well, maybe it makes Harry feel a little more at ease in jail if he knows that Thompson is also restrained like he is.

Mistake to Enter Canada.

As a matter of fact, Thaw was a fool ever to have headed into Canada, no matter how hard pressed he was. He stood a better chance in any big city of the United States of escaping capture. But what could they do with Harry? He is altogether too dictatorial.

When I came up here last Wednesday I hadn't seen Harry Thaw for two years. I went to see him in jail with Mr. Carnegie. I wanted to help Harry an old friend. I saw him in his cell. As I approached the barred door Harry came up, put his hand through the bars and said to me: "Hurry up, hurry up, Oscar. I want to shake hands with you."

And then, while he had an argument with his brother-in-law, I stood to one side in the corridor, apparently forgotten by him. His argument with Mr. Carnegie was on something Harry was bound to do. He had some plan and Mr. Carnegie didn't approve it. But I don't know what it was.

I wish Harry had never heard of Canada. He would much better have driven his automobile down the line to New York city and registered at a Broadway hotel than to get up into this scattered territory, where every stranger attracts attention.

THAW FURIOUS AT "LOVE" INTERVIEW BY EVELYN

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Harry K. Thaw flew into a paroxysm of rage in his cell-room today when he learned of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's "Yellow dog" estimate of his love for her.

He was shown a copy of a newspaper containing Evelyn's statement that: "Harry Thaw cares no more for me than he does for a yellow dog."

The article infuriated the prisoner. He ripped the paper in two with one motion of his strong, nervous hands. He threw the pieces on the floor and stamped upon them.

It was only a little while before that Thaw became enraged at the news that "Educated" Roger Thompson had threatened to "squeal" on Thaw if he (Thompson) is not freed from jail.

Thaw was told what Thompson had said. Its effect upon the prisoner was quick and sharp.

"Squeal!" screamed Thaw. "He's got nothing to squeal. He has no information of a damaging character against me. He can't get me in any score. Let him squeal and be ——— to him."

Real Fight on United States Soil.

All indications today were that the real battle to keep Thaw from being returned to Matteawan will finally be fought out on United States soil.

David Reynolds, one of the two immigration inspectors detailed on the case by the Dominion government, declared positively that Thaw will be deported, probably next week, into New Hampshire or Vermont.

"Thaw has lost his case before he really began to fight," said Mr. Reynolds. "The future events are clear. If Thaw wins or loses on his habeas corpus proceedings, he will be ejected from this country."

Under the Canadian law the immigration officials will take charge of Thaw as soon as they get authority from the upper court next week. The Court of Inquiry will then be held and it will be decided that Thaw is an undesirable alien. Thaw will be represented by counsel at the sitting of this court and will protest against deportation. The government expects to do this, but will allow no time to be wasted in the process.

New York Papers on Hand.

Papers have been received here from New York State by which the government's representatives hope to "show Thaw an incompetent."

Canada will then have washed its hands of the Thaw case and the fight will be transferred to the United States.

Crowds continue to stand about the jail in hope of seeing the famous prisoner. Several times Thaw appeared at the window of his cell and waved a handkerchief.

The Attorney-General's department in Quebec has asked the agistes of Sheriff Aylmer as to the safety of Thaw in the jail here. It was rumored that the government was prepared to place members of the constabulary around the jail if any foundation was found to exist of reports of a plot to liberate Thaw by desperadoes.

"Gun Fighters" Were Tourists.

Considerable excitement was caused here when five men, each carrying a rifle, stepped from a Grand Trunk train and went together to a hotel. Reports flew from lip to lip that they were "New York gun fighters" imported here to free Thaw. They turned out to be rifle enthusiasts who had been taking part in a shooting tournament.

Thaw is sending another telegram to ex-Governor William Stone of Pennsylvania. Thaw hatred a peculiar statement as to how he came to retain Louis St. Laurent, the latest addition to his legal staff.

"I had the honor to retain Mr. St. Laurent in behalf of Thompson because he is half Irish," said Thaw. "He is a brilliant man, half French and half Irish. Can you imagine a better combination to produce wisdom, sagacity and force? Half French and half Irish. Just think of it. My mother is half Irish, too."

Ex-Governor Stone lives in Pittsburgh. He was attorney for Thaw in the Thaw bankruptcy proceedings.

The retaining of William Travers Jerome, formerly District Attorney of New York County, and the man who has been used by the State as special counsel in several of Thaw's attempts to free himself from Matteawan, has had a dispiriting effect on Thaw.

Jerome has been engaged, not to fight the battle out in Canada, but to assist the New York authorities to regain their prisoner, should he be deported into any other state than New York.

Jerome at Work.

Jerome is already hard at work on the case, and today conferred with Vermont officials on the possibility of Thaw's being taken over the border at a point near Colebrook.

Jerome was selected because of his knowledge of Thaw and the Thaw case, from the first murder trial until the last attempt to prove White's slayer sane.

It was declared today that there is little doubt but that the scene of the Thaw case will shift next Wednesday to some point in Vermont. Telegrams from New York have already been sent to Governor Fletcher, asking his good offices toward rendering the return of the fugitive possible, and word received here from both claimants to the office of Governor of New York leads to the belief that both Sulzer and Hinman are positives, through having received some word from the Canadian government, that the immigration authorities have already decided what stand they will take.

The agreement which it is thought has been reached by Thaw's counsel—all leading and that is about as much as a priest loves Mephistopheles."

THROUGH TICKET WOULD HAVE GIVEN THAW HIS FREEDOM

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 23.—It was learned here today that Harry K. Thaw had no railway ticket for Detroit, Mich., when arrested on Canadian soil and cannot claim to be a tourist passing through this country. Thaw's lawyers allowed the belief to crystallize that Thaw was en route for Detroit when arrested.

Minister of Justice Doherty said today:

"If Thaw had a railway or steamer ticket to any point outside of Canada he would be permitted to pass unmolested. Apparently he had no such ticket."

DRINK HABIT

For the good of those who are victims, directly or indirectly, of the drink habit, I have written and published a very interesting illustrated book which describes how I was freed completely from the craving, and for several years I have not had any desire to touch a drop of anything alcoholic. My book contains information by following which thousands of drinkers have admittedly been saved.

Many men who do not want to be freed of the drink curse have been secretly saved by wives, mothers or sisters. They did not realize what was happening until they found all desire had left them—they couldn't drink any more whisky or beer—then they rejoiced at having been saved. My book has been proven many times worth its weight in gold to a multitude of families. Praised by physicians, judges, editors, clergymen and legions of others. Don't lose this notice; it may not appear again. Simply write to Edward J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., H 968, New York, N. Y., and you will soon receive the FREE book of valuable information in plain wrapper and happiness may soon be yours.

REPORT BUTLER GOT $25,000 IN CASH FOR AIDING THAW

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The plan that "Big Dick" Butler and his assistants so successfully followed in rescuing Harry Thaw from Matteawan was drawn up by two men who have been confessed friends of the slayer of Stanford White, and Butler was called in and given the commission, according to detectives who have been working on the case. They say the choice of assistants was left entirely to Butler and that one-half the $25,000 said to have been paid for the coup was delivered then and there. The other $12,500 was paid Butler last Saturday night.

Much talk of dissatisfied participants in the plot and of Butler "holding out" part of the money is rife and the detectives from Police Commissioner Dougherty's offices are working where the talk is loudest.

The Burns detectives have been recalled for the time being. It is declared on the best authority that all suspicion of bribery within the Matteawan Hospital for the criminal insane has been removed and there is little evidence that Howard Barnum, the imprisoned keeper, did anything worse than prove himself careless and lax.

Automobile No. 36824, N. Y., in which Thaw is supposed to have made his wild flight, was claimed on behalf of its owner, John Collins, yesterday, in Rochester, N. H., by Richard H. Fox, who bore papers testifying that he represented Collins.

THAW'S TREATMENT DROVE EVELYN TO STAGE, SAYS COUNSEL

Thaw told him, Reilly declares, that it was his desire to make Evelyn an "unhappy and uncomfortable as possible."

"Thaw has said the compelling reason for his making an attempt to escape was his love for his wife and because she returned to the stage. He said that simply to try to create the impression that she returned to the stage from choice. The fact is that her allowance was discontinued in June, 1912. It had been interrupted before and then continued.

"I went to see Thaw in Matteawan in September, 1912. I spent a whole afternoon with him. Among other things I told him that his wife had been forced to sell all her furniture. He said that he did not regard Evelyn as his wife, legally or morally. I told him she had nothing more that she could sell, and asked him if he could not do something for her. He said that he would take the matter under advisement. Then he said: 'I want her to try the case in court, and after I have beaten her I will take the matter up.'

"Finally I went to see Thaw once more, and reminded him that seven years ago he had taken Miss Nesbit from the stage, and that it would be very difficult for her to start her stage career again. Thaw's reply was:

"'I don't care what becomes of her.'

Mrs. Thaw, who was present, then took part in the conversation. She said: "His saying that his attempt to escape was due to my return to the stage was just a cunning pretext, due to his desire to get public sympathy."

"Do you reciprocate his alleged affection?" she was asked.

"I certainly do not," she replied. "I live him about as much as he loves me,

EVELYN, THAW'S EVIL GENIUS, SAYS MISS DIX

By DOROTHY DIX.

On the eve of his last and most desperate battle for liberty, Harry Thaw has given out an interview in which he bemoans the fact that his wife has returned to her old life on the stage, and declares anew his deathless devotion to her.

"My greatest misfortune is that I have lost the one woman I love," he says. "But to me she will always be the dearest girl in the world. She is the one and only woman for me on earth."

If this be true, and in spite of all that she has done, in spite of all that she has cost him, and the way in which she has treated him, Harry Thaw still loves his wife, he deserves to rank—speaking in vaudeville terms as befooses one who writes of the affairs of Evelyn—as a brother among the immortal lovers of history. In fact, he makes the balance of them look like four-flushers, and has got Romeo backed up against his poison bottle, and Leander lashed to the mast as it were.

Also, and incidentally, he furnishes thereby a more convincing proof of his insanity than was ever brought forward at either of his trials. For no man ever loved a woman with less reason. No woman was ever more completely a man's evil genius than Evelyn Nesbit has been Harry Thaw's, and if, after all that is past and gone, his heart still enshrines her, it is a cause of the "grand passion" as a rule we can only marvel—and feel the kind of sneaking sympathy we always do feel when a man makes a glorious fool of himself over a woman.

A Unique Case.

The Thaw case! I wonder if there will ever be another tragedy in real life that will grip the popular imagination as it has, or if there will ever be another story that will run the gamut of every human passion that that did! Murder case follows murder case on the court dockets, revelations of the tenderloin come with sickening frequency, other sensations evoke but a languid curiosity, but the interest in the Thaw case is just as keen and vital today as it was on the morning after Stanford White was shot.

Seven years have not sufficed to turn the spotlight off the principal actors in that drama—as witness the whopping salary that Mrs. Thaw is enabled, through it, to draw on the stage!

Now, concerning the Thaw case there have not been fifty-seven different varieties of theories held, but fifty-seven million different theories as to the why and wherefore of it have been entertained by every man, woman and child who either read of it or wrote of it.

My own particular theory—and I reported both trials—is that it stands as the one great and unapproachable illustration of the truth about the lure of forbidden fruit and the sweetness of stolen waters.

One Thing He Couldn't Buy.

Evelyn Nesbit's unfailing fascination for Harry Thaw was the fact that she was forbidden fruit, that he knew he should not marry her. He killed because he was uncertain of her, and she holds his wandering fancy yet because her love is the one thing that his money has never been able to buy for him.

And I think she married him because he represented to her the forbidden fruit of rich and fashionable Pittsburgh, where she was born and raised, the shut doors behind which the poor and humble little granddaughter of a cobbler had never penetrated.

From its psychological side the story is a curious one, as I read it. Let us begin with the meeting of Stanford White with Evelyn Thaw, then a chorus girl and beautiful as a young Blackbird, with her dusky eyes and hair, her olive complexion and her purple red lips.

Stanford White was an artist, and aesthete. He was a man not young in years, and one of whom his excesses had taken a heavy toll, so that he was older than his age. He was world-worn, weary. He had exhausted every ordinary form of vice. Suddenly across his jaded vision flashed Evelyn Nesbit, wonderfully beautiful, in a new type and with a mind as green and receptive as her face was lovely.

She interested him, and he began to expose himself with her in a new way—to debauch her mind instead of her body. She learned all of the wickedness of the world while she still kept her little innocent face of a wistful child. It was tremendously piquant—the kind of thing that Yvette Guilbert used to do when she sang the songs of the Paris gutter, the while she looked like a nun.

White's Distorted Artistry.

I saw the book of five hundred photographs that Stanford White had made of Evelyn Nesbit and which he posed her for himself. There was not one that was on an indecent itself and that did not emphasize her youth, her childishness and her appearance of artless innocence. Yet she assisted at the orgies he gave in his studio. That was the distorted artistry of the man.

Then came along Harry Thaw. He saw Evelyn Nesbit, life, too, has the artistic temperament. Also Evelyn was the protege of White and thus forbidden fruit hanging on a particularly high bough. He asked her to go to Europe with him. When they started he had no intention of marrying her, but when they reached Paris this little creature, who was the wax of the artist, within, who had the soul of a Lais, who looked so innocent and knew all evil, appealed to the decadent French imagination with irresistible force.

Paris was in a fair way of going wild over her; and the American men who desired her and tried to win her from him, the more Harry Thaw wanted her and was determined to keep her, and then he saw that the only way he could do it was by marrying her. So he married her, and she told him the story of terrible wrongs that she had suffered at Stanford White's hands. It was the story that every woman of her kind from Delilah down has told, but it had the spectacular background of Stanford White's studio and his personality behind it to lend it a lurid color. Thaw believe it, as many other men have believed similar stories, because he wanted to believe, and because the very greatness of Evelyn's temptation soothed his vanity. It was as if one was marrying the favorite of a king and dukes have done that.

Pittsburgh Too Dull.

After Harry and Evelyn were married they went to Pittsburgh to live with his mother in a great, rich, splendid, dull-as-ditch water country place where Evelyn was bored to death. She who had been the friend of the most brilliant men in New York was condemned for society to the company of a dowager whose main interest in life was foreign missions, and a husband whose conversation has never been described as thrilling. She whose days had ended in midnight supper parties where "stunts" that made even the tenderloin sit up and take notice were pulled off, lived the uneventful country life where people yawn themselves to bed at 9 o'clock.

Above all, she was in the process of being reformed, which is always an almighty unpleasant experience for the victim of it. Harry watched her. His mother watched her. With the kindest and best intentions, of course, but it must have been gruelling ordeal for the little butterfly from Broadway who was accustomed only to adulation from her world. Particularly as there is no evidence that at any part of her career Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has ever qualified for the tearful and repentant role of a Magdalene.

How she must have been bored! The only way she could keep herself alive was by tormenting Harry, by making him jealous of Stanford White. And she appears to have kept him worked up to a frenzy on this subject all the time. It was the amusement of a woman who either knew men very little, or else was reckless of consequences.

At the time of the trial, after Mr. Jerome had exhausted every effort to refute the story she had told on the witness stand of White's treatment of her, and when he finally gave up and set down defeated, he turned to a woman sitting near and said:

"Why can't I break down her story? It's a lie, made out of whole cloth, and I know it and she knows I know, yet I haven't made a breach in her testimony. How can she keep it up?"

Too Well Rehearsed.

"Oh," said the woman, "ever since the day she was married Thaw has been catechising her along the very lines you have, and she's had to be ready with a plausible answer, and believe me, a jealous husband can think of more things to ask a woman in a minute than the most astute lawyer could in a month. She's rehearsed every word of her testimony a million times, and that has made her letter perfect."

In stirring up Thaw's jealousy against White I do not believe that Mrs. Thaw ever had the slightest intention of injuring White. She testified on the stand to her regard for him, and so far as she cares for any one, holds him in gratitude and esteem, but in diverting herself she simply went too far. She started a fire she could not control.

Practically every woman has had a similar experience, in a lesser degree. She has told her husband, or father or brother of some injury some one has done her, or some grievance she has against some one, not really dreaming of stirring up trouble—and then she has been amazed when the man has taken drastic action in the matter.

I think that was the attitude of Mrs. Thaw toward Stanford White and the responsibility she had toward his murder. She amused herself playing on Harry's jealousy and fanning it to a white flame, but she had no idea that he would harm Stanford White and she was stunned by the fatal shot he fired in Madison Square Garden.

Since the day he married her, Evelyn Nesbit has brought Harry Thaw nothing but misery and shame. She stained his hands with blood. She has cost him his liberty and most of his fortune, yet he loves her still. He is faithful to her who has never been faithful to him. And there are thousands of good women who give love and devotion and tenderness and service to husbands who weary of them and forsake them.

Great is the mystery of love and strange the way of a man with a maid.

'Forbidden Fruit' the Lure That Drew Harry and Evelyn Together

"Evelyn Nesbit's unfailing fascination for Harry Thaw was the fact that she was forbidden fruit, that he knew he should not marry her; he killed because he was uncertain of her, and she holds his wandering fancy yet because her love is the one thing his money has never been able to buy for him.

"And I think she married him because he represented to her the forbidden fruit of rich and fashionable Pittsburgh, where she was born and raised, the shut doors behind which the poor and humble little granddaughter of a cobbler had never penetrated."

FEARING KIDNAPERS THAW ASKS O'MARA FOR STRONG ARM MEN

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23.—Roger O'Mara, trustee in bankruptcy for Harry K. Thaw, received directions today from Thaw, through his brother-in-law, George L. Carnegie, to round up a pair of "strong arm" men for his use when delivered from the custody of the Canadian authorities.

Associates of O'Mara said Thaw felt the need of guards to block a possible attempt on the part of representatives of the New York authorities to kidnap him.

THAW WOMEN PLAN FUGITIVE'S DEFENCE

CRESSON, Pa., Aug. 23.—Harry Thaw's mother, sister and brother-in-law are to meet here within twenty-four hours to form the final plan for Thaw's deliverance from the hands of the law.

His sister—Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie—has been the directing spirit in the Canadian fight. It was she who secured the delay in court proceedings till next week. This delay is valuable to Thaw, as it gives him a chance to bring influence to bear in an effort to persuade the Canadian authorities to allow him to leave Canada in any manner he wishes. It also gives time to prepare plans for his escape to Europe, from the State into which he chooses to return.

Mrs. Carnegie has been called Thaw's "guardian angel," and since he was a boy, she has exercised the greatest influence over his life. She is the only one of his family who seems able to control him.

Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie kept in seclusion in New York upon their return from Sherbrooke, and before they left to come here. But they communicated with Mrs. Thaw here at Elmhurst and told her to expect them.

Mrs. Thaw is keeping closely in touch with proceedings in Sherbrooke, and has installed a private wire from the telegraph offices in Johnstown to her home. She hears of each move that is taken.

Mrs. Thaw admitted that arrangements will be made at the coming conference for putting unlimited funds at her son's disposal to help his fight. She refused to comment on Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's interview discussing Thaw's escape and fight for liberty. She was angry at the talk of how the "Thaw millions" are fighting Harry's freedom.

"You would imagine we were Vanderbilts or Astors," she said. "Mr. Thaw left an estate of $10,000,000 to be divided among ten children, after certain minor but bequests were carried out. Dr. Evans is right when he says if my son had been a poor man he would have been set free. They have been after the 'Thaw millions' ever since he was arrested."

"CAN DEPORT THAW," ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF VERMONT SAYS

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 23.—"Vermont is no place for Thaw," was the statement made today by Attorney-General R. E. Brown in answer to a question as to what course would be adopted in case Thaw were deported to the Green Mountain State. Mr. Brown said there was no doubt in his mind but what Thaw could be extradited. "It will simply be up to Governor Fletcher to honor a demand from the Attorney-General of New York," said the Attorney-General.

U. S. GOVERNMENT AIDING MEXICAN FEDERAL FORCES; PEACE DELEGATES SLAIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—That the United States has adopted a policy of allowing the federal troops in Mexico to receive practically unlimited supplies of arms and ammunition, was indicated by Secretary of State Bryan today when he confirmed the report that 40,000 rounds of ammunition had been allowed to cross the border at El Paso, Texas. This shipment is the first installment of an order for 400,000 rounds of ammunition and ten thousand rifles filled by an American firm, and which it is understood President Wilson has granted permission to be shipped across the border to President Huerta's forces.

The White House let it be known today that, no matter what sudden shift or turn the Mexican situation takes, non-recognition of the Huerta regime will continue to be the keystone of the American policy.

Plans made by the administration for dealing with the Mexican situation were held up today as the result of advices received from Envoy Lind at Mexico City. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan engaged in a long conference, and it is possible that the President may not send his contemplated message to Congress Tuesday. The present indications are, according to State Department information, that President Huerta has absolutely backed down from his belligerent attitude.

The bodies of Pascual Orozco, Sr., and other peace commissioners, riddled with bullets, were found in the streets of Huazila, Guerrero, when the federal troops forced an entrance into that town, according to a special dispatch from Mexico City.

According to the cable, Zapatista prisoners told the soldiers that Emiliano Zapata slew the commissioners with his own hand while in a frenzy of anger at having been forced to abandon their retreat which had served him in many times of crises during the two years he has been closely pursued. Zapata is said to be hiding in Guerrero.

A. Francis B. Nyut, auditor of foreign affairs of the Du Pont De Nemours Powder Company, a nephew of United States Senator Du Pont of Delaware, is in Mexico country, after fleeing North in the steamer Mexico with 200 other American refugees.

Mr. Du Pont is filled with a sense of injustice at the foreign policy of the government at Washington. He was for six weeks amid the worst turbulences of the Mexican revolution and has come to believe that the only solution of the situation lies in one of these three courses by the United States.

Advocates intervention.

1. The immediate recognition by President Wilson of Huerta as the head of the present Mexican government; or

2. Sending a strong force of United States soldiers across border and stationing them in Mexico City to restore order; or

3. Taking over the French loan by American financiers and the offer of New York banks to finance and aid the present Mexican government.

He said:

"Several Americans and myself on August 13 were dining at the Chapultepec, a restaurant overlooking the park which surrounds the castle.

Dined During Firing.

"Cannon and gun shots are as frequent in Mexico these days as the toot of auto horns in New York, so that when several volleys were fired on the Passeo del Reforma we did not consider it serious and continued with our dinner.

"Suddenly the proprietor of the cafe, his face pale, rushed into the room and shouted, 'Fly for your lives.'

"That was enough. We knew the insurrection had broken out again over our very heads.

"Our auto was drawn up outside the door and we all jumped into it pell mell, speeding to the business place of Dorlor Carlisle, one of our party.

100 Sought U. S. Protection.

"Arriving, we were more than ever convinced that the new outbreak was serious, because we found that over a hundred other Americans, with their wives and children, had gathered there. For a moment all was quiet. Naturally we turned to the American embassy for protection and information.

"What was our surprise when we telephoned them and could gain absolutely no information. We waited a half hour longer; the women were becoming hysterical. No news came, and the sound of shooting continued in the streets. Within two hours after we had heard the first shots, 200 of us were on our way to Vera Cruz. It was our only possible chance to save ourselves."

Mr. Dument was asked if he saw any outrages committed against foreigners while he was there.

Two Recent Outrages.

"I learned on good authority of two recent occurrences which made my blood run cold.

"Several miles north of Mexico City there was a German living peacefully with his wife and two daughters one afternoon the rebels summoned his house, bound him and his wife to trees and before their very eyes ravished the bodies of their daughters.

"An American farmer was surprised by a band of seventeen insurgents. He was bound hand and foot and his wife maltreated before him. Later the rebels cut off portions of his wife's body and buried them at him."

BRYAN SUPPRESSES NEWS OF MEXICAN ATROCITIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The AMERICAN is informed on high authority that there is on file in the Department of State a list and record of 125 Americans slain in Mexico since the beginning of the Madero revolution.

Thirty American women—wives, mothers, young girls and even a nun—are known to have been the victims of the lawless soldiery.

It is said that the State Department has been informed by its secret agents in Mexico that these 125 specific and provable atrocities were the direct result of revolutionary conditions.

Records of rapine and destruction of American property are overshadowed by the list of lives lost and homes invaded.

The official reports have been kept secret, pending the diplomatic efforts to calm Mexico. The details are unspeakable. American citizens have been shot down wantonly by roving bands of guerillas or bandits calling themselves soldiers.

The story of a Sister of Charity who fell into the hands of Orozco Campos and thirty of his men, is one of the darkest chapters in the official reports. Secretary Bryan refuses to make public any of these reports, although many of them are official, coming from United States consuls.

WILSON, FIRM WITH HUERTA, TO BACK UP SPECIAL ENVOY LIND

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—It was announced at the White House that there will be no recession from the demands on Huerta, as made to him in the proposals delivered by Special Envoy Lind.

The President will state in the message he will personally read in Congress next Tuesday his attitude on the whole Mexican situation.

Huerta soldiers are clamoring for pay, and some of them have gone over to the revolutionists at Vera Cruz. Huerta is no longer able to get loans in Europe.

The report that Carranza had refused to lend Huerta any more money was known at the State Department today. It was also stated that the "knowledge was unofficial."

Everybody's Doin it. Doin What? Politics

George P. Lawrence's resignation from the Public Utilities Commission, to which he was recently appointed, has created quite a stir in political circles.

Representative Washburn of Worcester, who fathered the bill establishing this Commission, but said it didn't look like his own cheebil after the New Haven lobby got through with it, would like to have Mr. Lawrence's place.

* * *

Representative Washburn is out for re-election to the Legislature, but would rather have a chance to work out his measure on the Commission. But he is not saying anything to Governor Foss about his capididey, suspecting that the Governor knows all about him anyway.

* * *

Governor Foss leaned over and looked into the political alcove yesterday. Things were getting and you could almost see the bottom. So the Governor stuck his finger in and stirred it around a bit.

* * *

The Governor pointed out that the Democratic party had stuck its tender neck into a New Haven collar. He also pointed out that the Republican party is deaf in the ear that's turned toward the people.

* * *

"Well, are you going to run independent, then?" came the question.

"A splendid day," replied the Governor.

* * *

Mayor Fitzgerald went to a dentist yesterday. He went to find out whether he had broken any teeth when he smashed them at the word that James J. Storrow had ended the Elevated dispute.

* * *

Mr. Storrow's name came as a complete surprise. He suggested that the road and the men get together, settle their own scraps, and long as the money they would have to spend on extensive arbitration hearings.

The proposal was accepted with a "Why didn't we think of that before," air.

* * *

What's that got to do with politics? Ask the Mayor.

* * *

Judge Thomas Riley tried to take Lieutenant-Governor Walsh to an outing of Bristol Democrats by automobile, but the auto had a puncture and two blowouts and they were late. If it hadn't been for Judge Riley they wouldn't have got there at all, for there was no pump for the tires in the machine.

* * *

What? Oh, to blow up the tires.

* * *

Congressman Gardner is planning to consult with Messrs. Elliott, Mellen and Tuttle—not remotely connected with New Haven affairs—so that he may get a thorough understanding of the railroad situation.

He undoubtedly will learn a lot about railroads from them, but it doesn't take a president or past president of the New Haven to tell what's the matter with that tilleared and inflated concern.

* * *

What the New Orleans needs is a pin prick. If Congressman Gardner is out of pins, Governor Foss isn't. Preps Walsh has one in his lapel also.

* * *

District Attorney Pelletier will not be unopposed in his fight for re-election. No, sir! Pelletier seeks both party nominations, but Timothy Coakley says he will fight him in the primaries.

* * *

Governor Foss said at the Marshfield Fair that a farmer is a man who makes his money in the country and two thousand in the city, and an agriculturist is a man who makes it in the city and spends it in the country.

That fixes the farmer vote. If the Governor wants it.

* * *

Senator Thomas Joyce—bucking the Curley machine, shorties. "I'm the guy that put the Joy in Joyce," and is confident he'll succeed Senator Brandeis. His record has a bad spot about the time the Trolley Veto was voted on. What do you think he says about it?

"I didn't jump the traces, because we didn't have a Democratic Governor then."

GARDNER RAPS MACHINES OF BOTH PARTIES

Congressman Gardner, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, criticized the "machines" of both parties in his address at the Danvers outing today.

"It is the function of the State committees to elect candidates—not to nominate them," he said. He continued:

I wish that I felt as sure about the Republican nomination as some of my enthusiastic friends. I pray that not one of you will stay away from the primaries through overconfidence in the result.

Colonel Benton has strong support among those party men who hitherto have been so potent in our politics. Just because its headquarters are in the same building with Colonel Benton's I have heard it suggested that the Republican State Committee is back of my rival's candidacy. I do not think there is any truth in the statement. I certainly hope not, as I am somewhat apprehensive of the future usefulness of the State Committee, unless it confines itself strictly to its true function.

The function of any state committee is to elect the party candidates. No state committee, whether Republican, Democratic or Progressive, ought to interfere with the nomination of candidates nor ought it to dictate party policies, nor ought it to dabble in legislation.

If properly organized, the Republican State Committee can become a splendid servant for the party; but as a master it can never be anything except a sorry misfit.

8,000 Erie, Pa., Labor Men Decide to Strike

Will Protest Coming of State Troops in Machinists' Trouble.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 23.—President George A. Cooke of the Central Labor Union, after a conference with the executive committee, today announced that a general strike of all union labor men in the city would be called either Sunday or Monday morning. Eight thousand men will be called out in protest against the coming here of State troops to prevent violence in the machinists' and machinists' strike. A mass meeting or splinters will be held Sunday afternoon to form further plans.

Rivadavia Is on Way Back to Quincy Yards

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The superdreadnought battleship Rivadavia, built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company for the Argentine Government, and which has been in drydock here for the last three weeks, is today on her way to the shipyards at Quincy, Mass., where she was built.

Sister-in-Law of Pothier Is Dead

WOONSOCKET, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Octave Pothier, sister-in-law of Governor Aram J. Pothier, is dead at her home. Mrs. Pothier was in fine health Wednesday, but Thursday was taken ill with acute Bright's disease. She was thirty-five years old.

Henry to Fight for Farmers' Credit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Representative Henry of Texas, leading the so-called "insurgent" movement against the Glass currency bill, declared today that the efforts of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan to prevent amendments to the bill would put head of his proposal for greater credit for the farmers.

Discovered Cure For Asthma and Hay Fever

A Kansas Chemist Discovered a Simple Home Remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever and Makes a Generous Offer.

Mr. D. J. Lane, a chemist, located at 527 Lane Bldg. St. Marys, Kans., has discovered a simple home remedy for asthma and hay fever. To test it he sent some to people who had been suffering from asthma and hay fever for forty years and to their delight they state they were really cured. Mr. Lane is so proud of his discovery and has so much confidence in its ability to cure that he will send a $1 bottle by express to anyone who will write for it. His offer is that he is to be sent C.O.D. if it cures. The one taking it is to be the judge and report its effect within ten days after using the remedy. If you suffer from asthma or hay fever write for a bottle at once. Send us the beautiful young widow of the Duc de Chaulnes such marked attention that intimates look for an early marriage.

"PARIS DANDY" COURTS WIDOW OF DE CHAULNES

Boston society is interested in the latest international romance, which involves the courtship of the Duchess de Chaulnes, formerly Miss Theodora Shonts of New York, by Andre de Fouquieres, known as the "Paris Dandy," who lectured in Boston last Winter.

Andre de Fouquieres has many friends in this city. During his recent visit he paid American men, and Boston men in particular, high tribute, nor did he forget the American women. Of the Boston men he said:

"He is busy; has little to say; what he says to tell you he says in very few words, but there is heart behind it and common sense."

Monsieur Andre de Fouquieres is an Orleanist. He lectured here on Parisian styles and customs. He is a former president of the Royalist Society of France and a descendant of the famous royalist of the same name who was guillotined in the French revolution.

He sets the male styles in France. He has been known as the "slickest dressed dandy" in Paris for years. At Deauville, a fashionable Parisian resort, this season, Monsieur de Fouquieres showed the beautiful young widow of the Duc de Chaulnes such marked attention that intimates look for an early marriage.

CARDS CLOSE 1913 SEASON IN HUB TODAY

The rain early this morning gave the South End grounds a good soaking, but the last game of the series between the Pilgrims and the St. Louis Cardinals will be played as scheduled unless rain begins to fall before game time.

This will be the final appearance of Manager Huggins' team in Boston this season, and if they go true to form the Boston bunch should have no trouble in making it three in a row.

The game today will start at 2.30, the regular Saturday time for the rest of the season.

One change in the Pilgrim lineup will be made today. Gus Zinn, the new outfielder, will be played where Fred Smith in the batting order and this should hold the team. Smith is in a bad batting slump at present, while Zinn is slugging the ball hard.

The Pilgrims are playing a fast game at present. The men appear to be hitting timely, and the fielding and work on the bases is good.

Lefty Tyler will in all probability do the pitching for the Stallings tribe, though Bill James, who has recovered from his recent indisposition, may be used. Huggins will most likely send Perritt after the game, as all his other hurlers have been overworked lately. Harmon, however, who pitched three innings Thursday, may be sent in, in a last desperate effort to win at least one game.

Bill Sweeney Still Pilgrim's Manager.

Bill Sweeney is still at the head of the Pilgrims, as Manager Stallings is in Buffalo, where his wife is seriously sick. Mrs. Stallings will probably recover, but her husband will remain with her till there is a decided turn for the better. Captain Bill didn't have to display much managerial talent yesterday, for the Cardinals took good care that the game was never in danger, from a Pilgrim standpoint. The Pilgrim team hit the ball in savage fashion and took advantage of every error and break on the part of the opposition.

Zinn Was Fanned Twice Yesterday.

Zinn did not show up quite as strongly at the bat as on Thursday, fanning twice, and evincing a very decided weakness for going after low balls on the inside corner of the plate. He did, however, get a hit, scoring Devlin in the eighth, after Arthur had poled a triple to deep left. In the field, the Rochester youngster had but a single chance, a hard line drive, and he got behind it so with the ease of a Tris Speaker. Griffith, in right, gave a mighty good account of himself, and the Pilgrim outfield now is a much more respectable appearing trio than it has been for some seasons.

McDonald, Pinch Hitter, Again Connects.

McDonald, sent in as a pinch hitter, again gets credited for a single, though his effort was the weakest kind of a Cincinnati base hit. There were men on second and third when Texas came up. On the hit and run signal he rallied a week one half way to the pitcher's box. Wingo went after it and tossed it in to Donk, who had covered the plate. There was never a chance of getting Myers, who had started in from third. When the throw went wild, Sweeney, who had been on second, came in. Had the catcher tossed to first, McDonald would have been an easy out, yet, according to official dictates, the attempt is scored as a hit.

Myers Boosted His Base Stealing Record.

Hap Myers was full of speed, and added a couple of steals to his record. He stole second once, and kept on to third on a wild throw. Later in the game, pilfered third as clean as a whistle. Hap had a good day at the bat, getting a pair of hits, a walk, and taking one of Donk's benders on the wrist for a free passage. The long first baseman is beginning to show much better judgment in making his burglary expeditions than he did earlier in the year, and if he can keep it up, should have no trouble leading the league in stolen bases.

Time Cannot Stale His Infinite Variety.

Midget Maranville is getting the habit of opening up games with safe swats, a decidedly comfortable practice. His batting is steadily improving, and his ability to wait them out, very faulty early in the season, is now a big asset. Just at present he is as dangerous a batter as there is on any team, and if he can continue to reach, should make an invaluable man for the leading offensive goat season. He contributed his usual bunch of fancy plays, taking a couple of long flies in the outfield and making a pair of lightning running stops.

RED SOX HOPE FOR CLEAN-UP IN CLEVELAND

LINEUP FOR TODAY.

RED SOX.	CLEVELAND.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 23.—Those Red Sox are surely out to hang the banner on the Naps and put them out of the pennant chase. They repeated their victory of Thursday yesterday and as the Athletics won on both days that the Naps were losing, the Cleveland contingent is just about out of the gonfalon chase.

The Red Sox are jubilant over their 4 to 2 triumph in the opening game here and their 2 to 1 success Friday. These two victories make up for their eight consecutive defeats at the hands of the Naps earlier in the season, they say, and they are hopeful of making a clean sweep of the series by pitching southpaw Ray Collins against Birmingham's boys in the "getaway game" today.

Poor baseball all around by the Naps worked their undoing, and it would indeed be a shame to have them represent the American League in a world's series if they could not acquit themselves any better against the National League winners than they did against the Red Sox.

Poor work afield by Jackson, Leibold, Chapman and Graney paved the way for the Red Sox pair of tallies, while the Naps tossed their chances for runs away on the paths. O'Neil offended when he tried to score on a short fly to Hooper, but the worst blow of all was when Jackson, who was on second, raced to third on Johnston's line drive to Hooper.

The latter threw to Engle at first trying to double Lajoie off the initial sack, but Larry got back safely. Engle dropped Hooper's throw and notwithstanding that he made a high throw to Wagner at second, Jackson was doubled up.

Manager Carrigan has been presenting his strongest front here, but plans to give Mundy and other new comers a chance against the Tigers.

New Scoring Record Made at Lowell

LOWELL, Aug. 23.—The season's baseball scoring record was established here yesterday when the local club in the New England League scored 25 runs in seven innings against the Brockton team, which was held scoreless. The game was called on account of darkness. The Lowell club made 24 hits off two pitchers, including three doubles, two triples and three home runs.

50 in Brockton Tourney.

BROCKTON, Aug. 23.—More than fifty golfers played in the opening of the State tournament at the Brockton Country Club and as many more are expected today, when Francis J. Haines, Woodland, and A. G. Lockwood will appear, it is expected.

BIKERS CLASH FOR TITLE AT BEACH OVAL

Riders in Title Bike Race (50 Miles Behind Motors).

Elmar Collins of Lynn, former champion.

Jimmy Moran of Chelsea.

Worth Mitten of Iowa.

The big bike race of the year is on the card tonight at the Revere Beach Oval—a four-cornered battle behind the motors for the middle distance championship of America.

The distance is fifty miles and the four men who are out for the highest honor in the cycling game are all in first-class condition and confident of carrying off the diamond studded gold medal and the title as well.

The contestants are George Wiley of Syracuse, present middle distance champion; Elmar Collins of Lynn, who formerly held the title; Jimmy Moran, whose riding has been one of the features of the bench track this season and Worth Mitten of Iowa, always regarded as a dangerous rider at any distance.

Hundreds of rail birds were at the track early today watching the men work out and while Wiley ruled a slight favorite to retain his title, there were many who boosted the Lynn star to beat him out. Moran, also, had many admirers, while Mitten was not without his followers.

Manager Rotter has introduced a French custom for tonight of crowning the victor king and after being presented with the championship medal the winner will be crowned with a garland of roses and taken around the track.

In addition to the title race the regular amateur and professional events will be run off while a band concert will be held in the oval immediately before the opening of the race program.

Wolgast Still After Bout with Ritchie

Michigan "Wildcat" Is Able to Make Things Interesting for Leading Lightweights.

By JACK CONWAY.

AD WOLGAST is parading up and down the Pacific Coast, hurling challenges at the large squad of lightweights camped in that section of the country. The former pride of the 133-pounders is experiencing considerable difficulty in securing matches. It should not be so, as there is not a more satisfactory performer in the ring than the rugged Cadillac farmer.

Wolgast has tried to get another match with Willie Ritchie with but little success. Ritchie won the world's lightweight championship by defeating Wolgast on a foul last Thanksgiving Day, and has since refused to sign for another "go" with Ad.

Wolgast is twenty-five years of age, and still has a number of good fights left in his system. If the Michigan "Wildcat" will train, he will be able to conquer many an aspirant for championship honors before he retires from the ring.

The Western youth was a great fighter when he was in his prime, and was a real champion. He won the title by defeating Battling Nelson—as game a fighter as ever drew the breath of life—after forty rounds of furious milling at Point Richmond, on February 22, 1910.

The little German battler experienced a great deal of hard luck, after winning the championship. Broken hands, arms and an attack of appendicitis finally caused his downfall. The Wolgast that was beaten by Ritchie was but a mere shadow of the little ring demon who wrested the lightweight title from Nelson that rainy Washington's Birthday, in the open-air arena at Richmond.

AD IS STILL CONCEITED.

WOLGAST has not engaged in a hard fight for some time, and is reported as being in good condition. Ad may not be as strong as he formerly was, but he is every bit as game and conceited as he ever was.

Wolgast still thinks he is the greatest fighter of his inches and weight in the world. He says he is willing to back up his statements by betting as is able to defeat Ritchie.

If Wolgast is anxious to regain his lost laurels, he should get himself into perfect condition, and then sign for bouts with Cross and Murphy. If he could defeat these two men he would be in a position to demand a return engagement with Ritchie.

READ STILL AFTER BALDWIN.

JACK READ, the Australian lightweight champion, may be matched to clash with Matty Baldwin at the Atlas A. A. on September 9. Read has not engaged in a bout in this country. He has been offered several matches in New York, but wants to make his American ring debut in this city.

Read is anxious to secure a date with Baldwin, as he realizes if he is able to conquer the sturdy Roxbury Hill "Bearcat," he will be a "card" in this country, as Baldwin has a national reputation.

BIG CROWD WILL SEE GO.

A CAPACITY house is expected to witness the twelve-round bout between Sam Langford and "Porky" Flynn at the Atlas A. A. on next Tuesday evening. Fight "fans" are anxious to get a line on Langford's present ability, while they are also eager to see Flynn perform.

Flynn will probably carry Sam along at a merry pace for eight rounds or so. Whether he will be able to hold his own with the "Tar Baby" in the latter part of the bout is an open question.

CROSS PICKED TO WIN.

LEACH CROSS will probably be made a big favorite for his Labor Day bout on the Coast with Johnny Dundee. Dundee recently knocked out Jack White of Chicago, but his showing in that bout was not an impressive one. Cross is the hardest hitting lightweight in the country, and if he is able to land one of his wild right-hand punches Dundee may go to the canvas for the count.

WOODLAND AND BRAE-BURN IN BELMONT FINAL

The final match for the State championship in foursomes, and the possession of the much coveted "executive committee's trophy," began at the Belmont Springs Country Club of Belmont this morning. Woodland is pitted against Brae-Burn, and a tussle ensued.

The final is at 36 holes, and the match will continue throughout the day. The champions, P. W. Wilkinson and H. H. Wilder of the County Club, were put out of the running by Sturm's stubborn victory yesterday, and after the Country Club had sustained T. M. Claflin for Wilder, the four having been chosen as strongest, Anderson and Roark won by 2 up in the semi-final. The card of 78, with Anderson and Roark played, was the best of the day, and predicts their strength in today's matches.

Woodland is represented by H. Hoyt and Francis Ouimet, the latter being the amateur champion of Massachusetts, and a sterling golfer. He injured his hand recently with a chisel, but his play has not be affected from this. Hoyt is playing exceptionally well, laying them up dead and hitting terrific ball. His home work will be most, and an intimate knowledge of the partner can do, steadies the nerves and promises much for the coming play.

Baker-Sheppard Again.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Mel Sheppard, the veteran distance runner, and Elmer Baker, who defeated him in Chicago on July 4, will clash again in an 8-yard race at Travers Island on September 20.

Attractive Card for Rockingham Closing

Geers Cox and Murphy Will Furnish Plenty of Good Racing Today

By E. W. FARNUM.

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 23.—Grand circuit horses close their five-day meeting at Rockingham Park this afternoon. To-night there will be real "innocuous desuetude" at the big racing plant so far as the big line horses are concerned.

The "getaway day" card is of sufficient strength to hold down on the present meeting. Geers, Cox and Murphy will be in action this afternoon and that means attractive racing regardless of what they bring to the wire.

In the three-year-old trot, Cox will have Derby Worthy and Murphy will have George Rex. Geers will have J. D. S. What others of the sizable original entry will start is a matter of guess work until race time.

Cox Should Win Easily.

Baring is among the entries of the 2:10 trot, and Cox should not have a very difficult time winning with the son of Bingara if he turns for the word with him. Barring accidents, the Todd stallion Sarsanac should be heard from, as he is a stout chap of the sort that has been successful in half-mile track starts. The Haverhill horse, Judge Potter, a four-year-old, did well on the two-lap tracks in Maine.

Friends of the pacer Harvey C. expect to see him do something in the 2:14 class. Ben Como, Jr., Billie H. and Lucy Gray are among other half-mile track horses which will start in the class.

While Ed Geers is hardly what you might call garrulous, he is not a silent man by any means. Searching for a news story, a newspaperman asked Mr. Geers whether this was his last season as race driver, and whether it was true that he was to retire.

"Only talk," responded the Tennessean, who heads his profession. That even the suggestion of a retirement, which must come some day for him, seemed something to be considered in the distant future, the attitude of the veteran racedriver emphasized more than could words.

Geers Is 62 Years Old.

Geers is sixty-two years old. Broken bones have never deterred him from continuing in his profession. Gray matter has kept him at its top. It will be years to come before a driver will have in his stable at one time three trotters with which he has won an M. and M., and each of which is up to winning in its class.

Of the drivers coming up, there is A. S. Rodney, youngest of the successful Grand Circuit reinsmen. He is thirty-two years old. His first Grand Circuit season was last year, and he made Baden almost a household word. Then Baden was sold for export and the followers of racing said Rodney was dead so far as continuing in fame. But Rodney bobbed up in places where he wasn't expected to win like last year and when they were presenting him a cup in connection with a Cascade victory it was remarked that Rodney had gone to the scrapheap to get one to beat horses for which the long figure had been paid.

Rodney never paid more than $1,500 for a horse. Hedtrino Lad he secured for $1,100. There is something about Rodney's ways and methods which stamp him as a driver on his way to the top.

Murphy Pulled Well.

Both Walter Cox and Tommy Murphy are made drivers. Their fame is almost equal to that of Geers, although neither was a factor in the Grand Circuit ten years ago. Both have outstripped a score or more of reinsmen of no mean ability who have made unsuccessful attempts at Grand Circuit campaigning.

During the present week Geers has not won a race. Tommy Murphy, leading money winner of the year with more than $35,000 to his credit, has won more than $4,500 this week at Rockingham. His first money winners have been Tilly Tipton in the $3,000 Facing Futurity, the pacer Frank Bogash, Jr., the stake trotter Marigold, and the two-year-old trotter Peter Volo, each in $2,000 events.

Walter Cox has led all other drivers at the Salem track in winnings of big events. He had Lady Gratias first in the $5,000 Granite State, Judson Girl, winner of the $2,000 Rockingham, and Peter Johnson, winner of second money in the $6,000 Trotting Futurity for three year-olds.

MORE GIRLS ENTER FOR BIG SWIM CARNIVAL

Miss Winnie Conley, eighteen, of No. 800 Adams street, Neponset, who delighted thousands last year by her fancy diving in the Charles River Basin, is enthusiastic over the AMERICAN'S swimming carnival, to be held there on Saturday, August 30, from 2 to 6 p. m. She says the girls of Tenean Beach, where she was taught to swim, are to enter the carnival.

Miss Conley's fifteen-year-old sister, Grace, who has also entered her name, feels confident she will be one of the winners.

Mary E. Cummings, twelve-year-old daughter of Matthew Cummings, former head of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of America, who has come to the front as a swimmer, entered today.

Winnie Maher, eighteen, South Boston's favorite swimmer, is also entered. So is fifteen year-old Josie Amara of No. 8 Harris street, North End. From East Boston came an entrance blank bearing the name of Zita Foley, eighteen, of No. 181 Prescott street.

Marion Gibson, who participated in a number of the AMERICAN'S carnivals, promises to be on hand and demonstrate the kind of strokes she used in swimming from the Charlestown Bridge to Boston Light.

Boston Woman Wins Bar Harbor Match

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 23.—Edgar Scott of Philadelphia and Miss Pauline Davis of Milton, Mass., won the mixed doubles championship by defeating H. C. Taylor of New York and Mrs. Harold Sands of Rosemont, Pa., 6—3, 6—3. Mr. Scott this year was runner-up in the championship men's singles and one of the winning pair in the men's doubles.

20 Women See Bout in New York Ring

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—A large crowd, among whom were 20 women, saw Kid Ghetto outpoint Biz Mackey in a 10-round bout at the New Polo A. C. K. O. Smith and Freddie Haas boxed 10 rounds to a draw and Tommy Hopkins had the better of Billy Kramer in 10 rounds.

Brockton Releases Pitcher.

BROCKTON, Aug. 23.—Manager Fred V. Harrington of the Brockton New England League team today released Pitcher Pomeroux. Bailey, a semi-professional from Boston, has been signed by Manager Harrington and reported today.

Young Dies from Blow by Williard

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—John "Bull" Young, the giant Wyoming plainsman, who was knocked out by Jesse Willard in a bout here last night, died today from an upper cut on the chin. Experts stated it was the hardest blow ever struck inside a ring.

The knockout occurred in the eleventh round and brought with it the spectre of a fatality.

Contracts Signed for America Cup Race

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Contracts between the New York Yacht Club and the Royal Ulster Yacht Club for next year's race for the America cup have been signed, sealed and delivered, and now nothing stands in the way of the contest. The official announcement to the effect will be made in a day or two.

The New York Club is going ahead with its plans for the defence of the cup, and announcement will also be made soon as to the size of the boat which will meet Sir Thomas Lipton's 76-foot Shamrock IV., as well as the owner or owners of the boat or boats to be built to meet her.

That Lipton will be met with a yacht of the same size as his own is believed to be a certainty, and that there will be at least three yachts started in trial races for the honor of defending is also practically assured.

Bay State Rifle Team Second in Big Shoot

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 23.—The Massachusetts rifle team, at the conclusion of the second stage of the three long range 15-shot contest for the $3,000 Herrick trophy, ranks second, 10 points behind Iowa, 1,168 to 1,158. The battle is to be won and lost today on the 1000-yard targets.

From the start in the field of 38 teams it was a neck and neck race between the Bay State and Iowa. On the 600-yard range Massachusetts led by one point, scoring 588. Captain Stuart W. Wise and First Sergeant Perry S. Schofield made the perfect score and three others missed it by but one point.

Fiddler Makes Big Haul at Saratoga

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—W. G. Yanke, a violinist, who temporarily quit fiddling so that he might watch the ponies, is said to be something like $10,000 richer today as the result of bets he placed yesterday. Yanke backed Swish at 9 to 5 and the horse won. With his original capital and his winnings he plunged on Korlbago at 5 to 1 and 6 to 1 and his selection was a winner.

"The Plot for the Pennant" By HUGH S. FULLERTON A GREAT BASEBALL STORY Absorbing Short Serial Begins in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

OVER two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men are at work pushing a great tunnel out under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering scheme ever conceived by the brain of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived on the scene, after a swift 3,000 mile run in a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and men and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then follows a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot away from the disaster, and after hours they come into the view of faint lights at main station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach the steps of the rear car, the train slides out into the tunnel and leaves them screaming and cursing and running in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A score of financiers are gathered on the roof of the fifty-two-story Hotel Atlantic, called together by the subterranean of Lloyd, the master man of money. There, introduced by Rives, McKendree Allan, the inventor, tells them of his great plan to tunnel the Atlantic. "It cannot be said," he is going to be 3,100 miles long."

The tunnel city is built on the Jersey plains, and work is pushed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredgers, push down into the bowels of the earth. Similar scenes are being carried in Bermuda, Fayal, at Flamborg and on a great plain beyond London. Allan is the moving spirit everywhere. He is almost never at his home in Fenwick City, and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt. Mrs. Allan and Rives find they love one another and they kiss. He blames himself, but she tells him it could not be helped.

When the news of the disaster in the tunnel reaches the surface the workers go crazy. Harriman, Rives' chief of staff, is mobbed and flees for his life. He races in his auto and tells Mrs. Allan. Not supposing the mob is anywhere near her house, she goes out on the street. Allan returns to Tunnel City to find his wife and child slain and Rives, his best friend, shut up in the tunnel and probably dead also.

He calls a conference of his engineers and discharges Harriman for cowardice. Then he himself takes the controller of a rescue train and dashes into the tunnel, running without stop to the 150th mile station.

They had covered the one hundred and fifty miles in sixty-one minutes.

Now Go On With the Story

ominous mutterings when the men saw Allan's face in the murky light as he briefly questioned the Indonitshk Robinson. But there was not time for any outbreak. Allan switched his train over onto the track the outgoing one had left clear and drove on into the gathering smoke.

But now their progress was slower. In another twenty miles their headlight was practically useless, for it only revealed billows and eddying clouds of smoke that rolled and tumbled in their path. They stopped at every sub-station, and in every one they found the engineer in charge still on his job, with as many men as he had been able to save. They had caulked up all the cracks, and had their oxygen machines working. At each one a doctor or two dropped off with plenty of supplies and set to work on those that needed help.

Finally, the engine groped its way into the sub-station at the 220th mile, where the faithful O'Malley was still making good air out of bad as calmly as if he had not known that unless the outside ventilating plant began shoveling more of the work there was only death ahead for him and his men in a few hours.

He was only a boy of twenty-seven, but he shook hands calmly with his chief and wiped the sweat out of his eyes with his free hand.

GOOD NEWS

"Yes," he said, "I'm certain that an air-pump is working further down, Mr. Allan," as coolly as if he were discussing the character of the stone at the end of the boring.

Allan waited to hear no reasons. O'Malley was the kind of young man from whom reasons are unnecessary. He pushed on into the smoke. Half an hour later they were beyond Robinson's farthest mark, and occasionally they had to take a bottle into the choking vapor and push debris off the rail. Presently the train came to a full stop. Before it was a pile of bodies.

Leaving the others in the protected coaches, Allan and Lefevre, guarded by smoke helmets and armed with smoke lights, pushed out ahead. Lefevre had respectfully refused to let him go alone.

There was not a sound now but the faint clicking of the valves on their oxygen generators in the helmets. Allan groaned as he picked his way over the field of dead staring up at him in the lantern light with horribly distorted faces. These were the vanguard of that awful army of despair that had staggered through the smoking ruin with Rives.

Rives was not among them, but suddenly out of the dense smoke a man appeared and dropped at Allan's feet. He wore only a tattered pair of trousers. Allan quickly flashed the light in his face. It was not Rives. With Lefevre's help they carried him, still breathing feebly, back to the train.

Two doctors took him in hand, and in a few minutes they had brought him to a consciousness of his surroundings. Under the further stimulus of a drink of brandy he was able to talk a little. His first statement, in broken English, which showed that he was a French Canadian, was that the Virgin had saved him. Lefevre began questioning him, gently but swiftly, in his own tongue.

He said that he had been unconscious at least once before. He had been revived by a current of fresh air blowing into his face. His head tried to get out of the tunnel and found that the smoke was too thick. He was trying to work his way back to the fresh air when they had found him.

He did not understand that in the smoke he had turned completely around again.

ALLAN COLLAPSES

Allan muttered an eager exclamation.

"That means that the ventilating plant is making headway against the smoke," he cried. "There's a chance for some of the others! Ask him if he heard anything of any others."

"Yes," replied the rescued, eagerly; "I heard somebody laughing several times."

"What! Laughing?" exclaimed Lefevre.

"Yes," the rescued made reply.

"Poor chap!" murmured Allan, when this was translated. "It's a wonder he didn't hear more than that."

But Lefevre was not wholly inclined to accept this explanation. He questioned Renard—that is the man's name—in detail, and finally told Allan that he was convinced that the Canadian had heard human voices.

"Then let us go to, in God's name!" cried Allan. "Volunteers from the doctors!"

There was a unanimous response. Allan chose the first two and with Lefevre set out into the smoke again. It was a terrible task—picking their way along the corpse-strewn track over blocked timbers and fragments of rock. Some one was falling constantly, for the smoke was like a heavy yellow wall against the glasses of the helmets. Once, after a stumble, Allan felt a terrific pain shoot from his right ankle up his leg, but paid no heed.

Suddenly they were stopped dead in their tracks. From somewhere ahead of them out of the thick yellow-bleak vapor came peal upon peal of shrill, unearthly laughter. For a space no man breathed and one of the doctors swiftly crossed himself. As suddenly as it began it ended, and to the four it seemed for a few moments that no human lips could have made the ghastly sounds that pealed and rattled up and down the smoke-filled galleries.

Then Allan began pushing on-ily-on and others stimulated after him as if afraid to be left alone. In another minute or two they came upon a small substation and the terrible laughter pealed forth again. Allan put his shoulder to the door and pushed it in and entered. Lefevre and the doctor at his heels.

A ventilating tube entered the station, and around the opening four men were writhing and squirming and occasionally from one of the smitten came a shriek of the horrible laughter that had startled them in the gallery. The whistling sound that came to the ears of the rescuers told them that the ventilating plant was working with increased power and the had kept the four alive. In the station, no closer that four had bumped into in their contortions, was an oxygen generator, unused. All four were foreign laborers. When they saw the smoke helmets of the rescue party, they screamed with terror and crouched in a far corner of the room.

ALLAN COLLAPSES

One of the doctors managed to make some sense out of the gibberish and gathered that they believed themselves in hell and had taken the rescuers for demons. When Allan and the others approached they sprang at them in the madness of terror and fought until they were overpowered and bound. Allan gave an order and they were hurried back to the train as swiftly as possible. One was dead before that goal was reached, and none of the other three ever recovered his reason.

As he staggered into the car with the last of the four, Allan collapsed in the aisle. He had been thirty-six hours without sleep and under a strain such as no man had ever borne before. The doctors quickly revived him, but when he insisted that he must push on again, in spite of their protests, one gray haired physician persuaded him to take a "stimulant and rest for a few minutes." Inside of a minute he had passed into a deep sleep that lasted several hours.

Lefevre and two of the doctors made the circuit of the tunnel and got past the station where the crazy men had been found, but they were driven back by smoke.

When Allan woke he was under the impression that he had not been asleep, and no one disillusioned him. He immediately donned his smoke helmet, and with the indefatigable Lefevre and a fresh doctor another attempt was made.

To Be Continued Monday.

FOR the past thirty miles the smoke had been perceptible, as it was growing thicker the farther they went. Robinson's train had not yet arrived, but they had only a few minutes to wait. The coaches of the train were crowded and there were curses and question you have put my wife have any bearing upon this tragic affair?"

"Some," responded the other, looking, however, with a most paternal smile upon the still and stately woman who, evidently waiting for him to make his business more intelligible, listened, but said nothing to his enigmatical remark.

"Mildred Farley was a dressmaker," this gentleman went on. "If you read the newspapers you know that, and also know that she worked hard at her duties for some weeks before her death. But what is very strange in her connection, and, together with some other reasons unnecessary to state here, makes it difficult for the police to settle down to the belief that her death was the simple suicide it at first seemed, is that no one has succeeded in discovering for whom she worked, and to what home she carried the various dresses she finished in that time. For though it may not be material to know this, and may not help the affair forward one jot toward its rightful issue, yet because it is a mystery and an unsolved one, those whose business it is to see every doubtful case made clear, have sent me to this house to see if some light cannot be thrown by you upon it."

He paused and looked at Genevieve. She at once raised her eyes and surveyed him steadily.

"You think, then, that I knew Mildred Farley?" was her question, clearly and coldly uttered.

"Did you not?"

Her lips broke into a smile. "Ask Dr. Cameron," she suggested, and seemed to think she had answered his question.

"If you did not know Miss Farley, it is strange she should have made the dresses of your trousseau, Mrs. Cameron."

"I don't understand you," was that lady's reply. "My dresses were made by no one but that girl. This I can assure you most positively, sir."

"You can. We are then brought round to my first question: Who was it that did make your dresses, Mrs. Cameron?"

"If it necessary that I should tell you?" she somewhat haughtily inquired.

"If you do not, I cannot prevent certain people I know from thinking it was Mildred Farley."

"And why?" Dr. Cameron now broke in. "What reasons have they or any one to connect my wife with that poor unfortunate?"

"Only a very material one which I leave to Mrs. Cameron to explain. In the room of that dead girl were found scraps and ends of silk and velvet, which were pounced by the police as pieces of the goods she had been lately making up into dresses. Among these was a morsel of trimming—here it is—and as this trimming or some just like it was worn by eleven women in dress worn by Mrs. Cameron, it struck one of our agents that she was in all probability the lady who had profited by this poor girl's handiwork."

"The conclusion of a man!" exclaimed Mrs. Cameron, with cold sarcasm. "I suppose there are in this city today twenty ladies with just that trimming on their gowns."

"And with this gray velvet for a dress? And this—I do not know what you call it—for another? And this soft white silk so suitable for a bride's adorning, and—"

"Enough! enough!" cried Mrs. Cameron, putting up her hands wearily as a half dozen samples of various goods and colors fell in a shower into her lap. "I own to these, but I do not own to Mildred Farley. You waste your time; you will never find that she did any sewing for me, however she may have had possession of these pieces. Is that enough, sir?"

"Hardly," his look seemed to say, but he rose. "And you will not tell me where your dresses were made?" he smiled.

"It is a secret I have kept even from my husband, but if you must have it, you must." And rising on tiptoe with a look of angry defiance at the doctor, she whispered something in the visitor's ear.

He listened, stared at her a moment and broke into a genial laugh.

"And so this is your secret," he cried. "Well, I know how to respect the secrets of a lady when such respect does not interfere with my duty."

And with a gallant bow he took his leave, expressing the hope that he had not made his call too lengthy.

The Back Porch

"SHE told you that?" cried Mr. Gryce. "And you believed her? Dumpie!"

"She spoke the truth," asserted his companion—the gentleman whose name we purposely suppressed in the last chapter.

"You think so?"

"I do. There was something in her tone, whisper though it was, which forced conviction. I do not question her word in the least."

"Well, we will see; I did not hear her and so may be pardoned for having my doubts. I will talk with you again, sir. The play may not be worth the candle, and it may; a few days more will determine."

"And Molesworth?"

"Is very well as he is."

This conversation, fragmentary though it is, will show something of the stand which Mr. Gryce was taking in this matter. He and Molesworth under his eye and as good as under arrest, and yet he was not satisfied. Something—was it instinct or experience?—told him that this affair possessed complications of no ordinary nature, and that to a conscientious man like himself there were doubts to be solved and possibilities to be sounded before he would dare proceed against the doctor as against a presumably guilty man.

But with the kindred remembrance of what the woman in Mrs. Olney's boarding house had said about Mildred Farley's frequent comings and goings without her great bat, he did not consider it so foolish now, and only wished he had probed the subject deeper at the time. It was not so late yet, however, but that he might discover she had been into possession of these pieces. Is that enough, sir?"

"Hardly," his look seemed to say, but he rose. "And you will not tell me where your dresses were made?" he smiled.

"It is a secret I have kept even from my husband, but if you must have it, you must." And rising on tiptoe with a look of angry defiance at the doctor, she whispered something in the visitor's ear.

IT was now Dr. Cameron who looked amazed. "Mildred Farley?" he inquired, wondering why this name was ever springing up at his hearthstone.

"The same," rejoined the other.

"Yes," assented the doctor, with a glance at his wife, which she did not meet, as answered was not in the hopes of the dancing fire-light before her; "I remember the occurrence well; it was not only sad but mysterious. Can the

Cassidy Analyzes Two 'Cures'

The market is full of fake nostrums. They are only another medium by which the swindlers separate the public from its good money. Mr. Cassidy exposes two cases today.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Next to consumption one of the most common diseases to this New England climate is catarrh. Though not as serious a disease as consumption, catarrh is too serious an affliction to let swindlers fool those afflicted with it.

A friend of mine having survived two consumption cures was troubled with catarrh. He read an advertisement of catarrh cure put out by the Gorham Company of Battle Creek, Michigan. It cost him $2.50.

The Analysis.

The "remedy" consisted six ounces of a reddish brown liquid for internal use and an ounce tin of "Antiseptic Balm" to grease the interior of the nose.

Here is what this marvellous liquid remedy was: eight per cent. of alcohol, twenty-five per cent. of sugar, sixty-seven per cent. of water and a trace of bromide of soda and iodide of potash.

Figure it out for yourself. How much good to a case of catarrh would be brought about by a weak solution of alcohol, sugar and water flavored with a trace of drugs?

Why pay at the rate of $25 a gallon for it if you really want such a remedy when you can make a gallon of it yourself for fifty-five cents?

The Antiseptic Balm was nothing but a little vaseline with a small amount of menthol and wintergreen added to let you get a smell of something like drugs.

Gorham of Battle Creek makes about 3,000 per cent. profit on his nostrum.

"Nature's Creation."

There's a consumption cure called "Nature's Creation." The ads say it conquers consumption and asthma. The principal owner is a woman who formerly was a Boston soiler. The recipe, she claimed, was revealed to her while in a trance.

The revelation originally told her it was good for another common disease. But somehow or other she changed the instructions of the revelation and sold it as a consumption cure for $5 a bottle, for twenty-five cents.

Add to ten ounces of water one ounce of potassium iodide and five ounces of compound fluid extract of sarsaparilla. This will cut "consumption and asthma." But it will do just as much as "Nature's Creation."

Choosing a Hat and a Husband

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says—

THROUGH the mossy-carpeted, scented temple, where hats are lifted tenderly and deftly on and off of fair heads and dark, I strolled, the gentle cynic beside me, with one bright eye open for an Autumn hat for me, myself.

All abott the outer edges of the temple glass cases rose, filled with vari-colored chapeaux on their slender stands, like so many bright storks standing on one leg. Out in the green open of the temple two-faced mirrors stood about, each with a tiny gilt and mahogany chair before it.

Tall women, slender as race horses; short ones, round and plump as partridges, all clad in trailing, ankle-binding black, insinuated themselves softly about, carrying meltingly perfect little hats on three fingers, their faces spread with the expression of a slave bearing his master's pet jewel in his hand. We walked slowly and at last stood still behind a little beauty of a woman who twisted and turned on a mahogany and gilt chair under countless hats that were lowered to and lifted in swift succession from her head.

Oh, la; such a weighty matter was this! Here was good honest labor and thought spent recklessly! The race-horse saleslady in black charmeuse searched and worked desperately and absorbedly. The girl on the chair, brown-eyed, gold-haired, sought out her image in the mirror under a myriad of hats at endless angles! Old Time trod swiftly by, and at last—at last, the little lady rose honestly.

"I must," said she, "I must think it over. I like this little blue one, but I must go home and think it over!" There was smiling and bowing and the lady of the startling brown and gold face-coloring was gone.

The gentle cynic turned and smiled wryly.

"Look at that, pray, mademoiselle! That reminds me, because it is so different, of the fashion in which that same careful little lady will go out and take unto herself a husband! Of course, sometimes a woman walks out of a temple of millinery with a fright on her head, just as she leaves the church door with a fright by her side. But in the first mistake it isn't because she didn't spend time and gray matter on it!

"See, now, this little lady. She worked like a little towhead, using time, patience, all her brain, her judgment, her artistic sensibilities. She didn't stop at one. She tried two dozen on the top of her gilt head. And now—she has gone home to 'think it over.'

"How will it be when she takes a mate? He will probably pick up her wisp of a handkerchief on the train between here and Chicago, they will look once into each other's eyes and the next day there will be a wedding and their pictures in the paper. She'll never know if he's becoming to her style of disposition until after she has him. She'd never in a thousand years walk out with the first hat that ravished her eye. She goes home to 'think it over.' But she walks off with the first man who touches her heart. And it's after that she 'thinks it over.'

"Tell me why that is—when the hat may be chucked into the yesterdays when this short season is over—and a husband lasts forever?"

So I have made a picture of it for the cynic's delectation. If he is right or not I do not know.

The Superior Sex

WHEN a man does a good deed he lingers round it long enough to put up a signpost.

No man ever admits he talked too much. The greatest concession he will make is that he made a mistake in the person in whom he placed confidence.

After a man has bought his meat and groceries and sent his children to the public schools for an education he begins to talk of what he has "done" for the town.

No man was ever sorry soon enough.

No man could ever tell the truth and his side of the story at the same time.

A man, while decrying that his wife is more patient than he is, will get up and pass the baby to its mother when it cries.

There are so many men in the world that all the meanness has been thought of.

There is this much to say about the faithfulness of man: Every time he builds a castle in the air he puts a different woman in it.

Having faith in a man sounds beautiful in poetry which never goes into details.

When a man laughs ten times a day nine of the laughs were inspired by something he said himself.

Any man would prefer remaining in ignorance to being enlightened by some one he dislikes.

It makes a man cross to make a demand on either his purse or his sympathy; therefore, women who have to handle the brutes, beware.

The best luck that happens any man is tant the people don't have time to investigate all his statements.

FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

KINDNESS MISPLACED.

The kindly old gentleman paused in his afternoon walk to watch a wee tot who was diligently searching the pavement for something she had evidently lost, and at the same time sobbing loudly.

"Come, come, little girl!" he ventured at last. "What have you lost?"

"Boo, boo!" came the reply, between many sobs. "I've lost the penny grandpa gave me! I came along the way you've just come, and I missed it about here!"

Touched by the child's grief, the benevolent old gentleman ponderously extracted a penny from his pocket. Kindly pressed it in the little tot's hand and said:

"There, there, little girl, here's your penny. Now stop crying, and run along. You must hold your money tighter next time!"

To his utmost surprise, the child stopped her crying immediately, and flashed on him a look of bitter contempt.

"Why, you wicked old man," she said, stamping her tiny foot, "you had my penny all the time!"

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

AUGUST 10.—I have wondered ever since the accident why Sally did not come to me, and learned this morning. She had sailed for Europe the day before, and was on the ocean the day Richards received Mrs. Allen's telegram to come at once.

I am so glad she is away. If she were here and did not come I would suffer all the pangs of an abused and neglected boy, and if she came, goodness alone knows what I would say or do in my weakness. I am sure I would demand the rights of a sick man to her devotion, or fret myself into a fever if she refused.

I had a note from her, today, written in Paris.

"My dear big brother," she wrote, "I can't tell you how alarmed I was at reading in the cable news in a Paris paper of your accident. I hope that the charge of exaggeration always made against the press is true this time. I receive daily cables regarding your condition from the doctor, and he assures me you are getting along all right. You know, my dear big brother, I need you, and can't get along without you. You are more than all the world to me.

"SALLY."

Isn't that just like a woman? She puts in that word "brother" twice to make me realize that I am no more than a brother to her, and then adds, "You are more than all the world to me," to keep me crazy about her.

She has a husband, and can't have me, but she likes to be loved, and intends to keep me loving her!

PAST PROOFS

In looking backward I find every reason for believing that her opposition to the widow was not actuated entirely by altruistic feelings. The book of warnings she sent me and many warning telegrams, to beware of the woman who was pursuing me, are proof to me that Sally loved me then, and I did not know it.

"I can recall hundreds of incidents that show her affection was not of the sisterly brand. When she would pass my chair, she would put a hand lovingly on my shoulder, and many an evening she sat between Jack and me on the porch, with her hand in mine. And it was not of my doing. Diary; she would thrust her hand in mine at every opportunity.

And the long walks we took in the evening, in order, as she claimed, to give the widow uninterrupted opportunity to make love to Jack, "because," she said, "she needed to be punished." Was that her only reason? Did she want to be alone with me only for that?

"You are so stupid," she said to me once, "that if a woman were in love with you, and tried her best to show it, you would never see it. Now suppose, for instance, that I loved you and had been trying to tell you for more than a year."

"But you don't," I added, "you love Jack."

"Yes," she repeated, dully, "I love Jack." He is my husband, and of course I love him. The law many centuries ago ordained that a wife should love her husband, and I wouldn't presume to question the law."

She laughed a little bitterly. "But suppose," she reported, "that I loved you, and told you so."

DISMISSAL

Sally is a very handsome woman. I recall that on this occasion, she was lying in a hammock, and I sat in a chair near her. We were on her porch, waiting, I believe, for Jack to return from town.

"If you loved me," I said, "I think I would make you realize as you have never realized what it is to have a man's love. But this is nonsense, for, of course, there is Jack."

"Yes," she said, "there is Jack. Max go home! You are so good-looking to night you are dangerous."

I laughed, for I thought it was only more of her nonsense.

"Go home," she repeated. I got up and started for the steps, rather sulkily to be treated so, and she caught up with me when I had descended the second step and threw both arms around my neck. "You are just two steps taller than I," she laughed. Then she pressed my face against her's and whispered that I was a dear, big stupid.

And do you know, Diary, I wonder now what it was that made me so stupid. I had been sure for years that she belonged to Jack, not because her marriage ties bound her, but because she loved him and had no room in her thoughts for any other man, that it never entered my head that she cared for me.

I know she suffered and grew thin and haggard when Jack was gone with the widow, but if I had had any sense I believe I could have made those ten days the happiest of her life.

And now, instead of being grateful that we have been saved from wrong-doing, I look at myself with disgust because I didn't recognize my opportunities. She was humiliated because of the manner in which her husband slighted her; her heart was mine all the time, and she couldn't tell me, and I was too big a dolt to see.

When I get well, if I get well—"You know, Max," the doctor said to me very frankly this morning, "something went wrong with your spine in that fall, and we have a fight ahead of us."

So there is an "if" connected with my future that is the biggest "if" I have met in my troubled existence. It is all right. If I win I will fight for Sally. Right or wrong, that is my intention. If I lose, I hope I will have ample warning that the struggle is going against me, so that they may get Sally here and I can slide out into the nowhere from her arms.

August 12—I do not suffer any great pain, only the pain of weariness, and the nurse is so patient and tender I am ashamed to complain of that.

I am bolstered up in bed a few hours every morning and write these lines at long intervals apart. It is a comfort to me to write that which I cannot speak about and it shortens the long days.

Manette always takes her nap at this time of the day, the nurse is gone for her morning walk, and Richards sits beside me—patient, faithful Richards.

"If anything happens to me, Richards," I said this morning, turning to her, "you must never leave Manette. You"—I had never told my one this before—"will find yourself a rich woman."

"I will never leave Manette under any circumstances," she said, somewhat brokenly, "and I don't want to be a rich woman. I only want you to get well so that we may all go back home, and be happy there again. I am so thankful every day, Mr. Max, that I work for the kindest and best man that ever breathed."

It was a tribute that pleased me. I tried to tell her so, and the next moment she was on her knees beside my bed, sobbing with her face in the bed covers.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

My unkel Fritz is cumming to the House tonite, sed Ma to Pa. He is a dear old codger, I remember how he used to tell a lot of funny stories to us wen he calm to our room in Colfax. I know you will like the dear old fellow because you luv humor, sed Ma.

I luv humor all right, sed Pa, but that naim Fritz dosent sound any too humorous. I heap I will git sum real laffs & not have to fake. Pa sed, but somehow I have a feeling that I cant shake off & that feeling is a feeling that Fritz isent going to be funny at all.

Wait till you see, sed Ma. If you ever have herd the dear old fellow making us all laff years ago, Ma sed, you wud not talk doubtful about him.

Years ago is one thing, sed Pa, & now is a other thing. I used to think the clowns in the circus was the funniest things in the world, Pa sed, but I went to a circus the other day & the clowns was about as funny as a rainy day in March. As we git older & wiser, Pa sed, we beekum hard audiences to play to & thare isent many things that reely tickle us.

Then Ma's unkel Fritz calm. He was a short fat man about sixty years old & he had a big meerschum pipe wich he kep smooking all the time he was at our house. He looked at me kind of hard wen he calm in, & he sed to Ma, it is time little sheildrens should be by thare bed, sirrity.

Bobbie always stays up till ten, sed Ma. He is older than he looks, & he hates to go to bed early. He talks after his father that way, sed Ma.

Oh, very well, den, sed unkel Fritz. Now, let us all be cholly and tell sum funny stories. Ain't it? he sed to Pa.

I guess it isn't, sed Pa. I cud see that he dident like Fritz very well.

Well, sed Fritz, so long that we are going to tell sum cholly chokes. It shud begin by me. Once dere vass a Irishman and he came over to dis country, sed Ma's unkel. He vas out a long time in dis country and so he vass what you call it green, like der color of a Irisher's flag, sed unkel Fritz. Der part is a cholke of my own, he sed, about der green flag. I made dat in myself. It is not of der story. Vell, der Irish feller he vass valking along in front of a store and he saw sum grape fruits sirrity yes.

Und ven der Irishman saw der grape fruits, sed unkel Fritz, he sed to der other Irishman which had came over to dis country only he dident came on der same ship, dot vass before the other Irishman calm rich saw der grape fruits, sirrity. He sed to der other Irishman, chee, Pat, it vuddent talk many of dem big oranges to make a pound, ain't it?

Nobobdy laffed exsep Fritz, because he had tould the story yong. He ment that the Irishman sed Sure it wuddent talk many of them big oranges to malk a dozen, but Fritz sed pound instead of a dozen.

He tould a lot moar jokes about the calm as the one about the grape fruit. Then he sang sum funny German songs, he thot thay was funny but thay wassent any funnier than the song called the Curse of a Aching Hart.

After he had went Pa kidded Ma about her unkel's quaint German humor. He is a rare wag, Pa sed. Think of all the sunshine he scatters around the world.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were higher today and markets were dull. In New York for the morning share transactions totalled only about 800,000 shares. The London stock exchange was closed and some traders in that city cabled buying orders for Canadian Pacific. That issue opened two points higher, but did not hold it all until the end. The list averaged a shade higher at the close than it did yesterday. Virginia Carolina Chemical was strong, closing 2¼ up. Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Amalgamated all ended with small gains.

The New York bank statement shows excess cash reserve to be $2,525,050, decrease $747,050; loans increase $4,079,000; specie decreased $220,000; legal tenders increase $1,021,000; net deposits increase $5,541,000; circulation decrease $478,000; actual statement, loans increase $6,956,000; specie increase $1,-100,000; legal tenders increase $1,410,-000; net deposits increase $10,713,000; reserve decrease $2,525,050.

New York Market Stronger.

The New York market was stronger at the opening, most of the initial transactions being at advances. The rise averaged small in most instances, but Canadian Pacific was an exception, opening 2 higher. This was almost wholly on account of foreign influences, as there were a good many orders to buy that issue received by cable. They came from speculators who could not trade at home as the London market was closed. After that an hour Canadian Pacific had lost part of its gain.

The tone of the market was strong and among the advances were: Amalgamated ⅜, Steel Common ¼, Union Pacific ½, Southern Pacific ⅜, Reading ⅜, New Haven ⅝, General Electric ⅝, Chino Copper ½, Chesapeake & Ohio ½, St. Paul ⅝ and Northern Pacific ⅜.

Strength in American Locomotive was due to a statement by the president of the directorate to the decision to cease manufacturing automobiles. This branch of the business has always proved a losing venture and with it eliminated the financial prospects of the corporation are much brighter. Lehigh Valley began ¼ lower, but recovered.

The Curb was steady.

Comment on New Haven Road.

The New York Sun, which is accounted among the most conservative of public prints in financial circles, says: "The New Haven appears to be preparing for important changes in its financial makeup.

"The restlessness of the stockholders as evidenced in the meeting at New Haven and the criticism of the size of the underwriting syndicate commission has been more definitely illustrated in the selling of the stock, and throughout the decline has been a parting of old holders with a long held treasure rather than in any wise a professional decline.

"The restlessness of stockholders is probably a healthy sign in the New Haven, carrying with it a close watchfulness of the welfare of the property that will be to its benefit in the end.

"Operating results of the New Haven for the quarter ended June 30 undoubtedly added to the weakness of the stock. While gross was about the same as last year, net after taxes and rentals, amounting to $3,773,709, showed a loss of $1,429,479. The balance sheet as of June 30 compared with that of December 31 last, showed some heavy shifting of accounts and large changes. Securities freed from pledge during the six months amounted to $115,000,000. The item "other investments" showed an increase from $78,000,000 to $133,000,000. Working assets showed the big increase of $34,241,925 to $108,584,627, while working liabilities decreased about $7,-000,000."

Mr. Bryan for the Bill.

Some Democratic Congressmen who are fighting the Administration currency bill in caucus as they did in committee are personal friends and political supporters of William Jennings Bryan and they sustained a severe jolt when Chairman Glass of the House banking committee read in caucus a letter from the Secretary of State defending the new bill in reference to the proposal to have the bill prohibit interlocking directorates is most interesting. Mr. Bryan wrote:

"Competition can be effectively prevented where the same men act as directors of competing companies. I am in favor of the remedy now as I was at the beginning. In fact, more has become recent disclosures have given further proof of the employment of this means of eliminating competition, but I do not think it wise to make it a part of the pending currency bill."

He himself offered an amendment to that after revealing party pledges to the people. He added as a postscript:

"Since sending you my letter I have examined the platform of the party adopted at Baltimore and find that interlocking directorates are spoken of in the anti-trust plank. I suggest that you make an addition to the sentence in which I spoke of interlocking directorates. The plan has been considered mainly as a means of dealing with the trust evil—in fact, it is a part of the anti-trust plank of the Baltimore platform."

Free Wool Is Sure.

Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is sure that free wool will be a part of the tariff bill now under debate. The Republicans have those amendme to fix the wool schedule but are not wholly in accord. The only change expected concerns wool tops. It is thought that the committee rate of 5 per cent. will be raised to 10 per cent. which is 5 per cent. less than the House rate. The conferees have announced that when the bill gets into conference they will accept the 10 pent. rate.

Replying to a resolution asking for information, Secretary of Treasury McAdoo estimates that importers having merchandise in warehouse or transhipment under bond awaiting new tariff rates will save about $14,000,000.

American Locomotive Report.

The annual report of the American Locomotive Company for the fiscal year ending June 30 shows the gross earnings to be the greatest in the history of the company. The total earnings were $54,-868,174 which are more than $5,500,000 greater than the earnings in 1906-07, which held the previous high earnings record. The expenses were $48,031,031, and the interest charges $641,178, leaving $6,185,505 for dividend distribution.

Financial News in Brief.

The Pennsylvania road is about to order 15,000 tons of steel rails.

The Union Pacific road is reported to be in the market for 500 to 1,000 all steel box cars.

The Tax Commission of Kansas says that only corn was harmed in that State by the drought and that the wheat harvest will be a "bumper."

According to a Vancouver dispatch Japanese interests have abandoned the idea of establishing a steamship line from Yokohoma to New York to use the Panama Canal. Japan government will not subsidize it.

The London Stock Exchange was closed today because of a holiday.

The Boston & Maine is in the car market for 1,000 gondolas and the Maine Central for fifteen passenger and mail cars.

REP. WILLIAM E. CARNEY OF CHARLESTOWN

This is a Democratic Representative who was faithful to his trust and voted for the people in the most important issue before the Legislature. He was one of the thirty-seven Democrats who voted against delivering more than half the street railways of Massachusetts to the tender mercy of the New Haven Railroad.

He followed the recommendation of Governor Foss, the Railroad Commission, the Tax Commissioner, the Public Franchise League, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Real Estate Exchange and the Interstate Commerce Commission and defied the lash of the New Haven lobby.

About this bill the Public Franchise League had said: "HOWEVER DESIRABLE THE CONSTRUCTION OF NEW ELECTRIC LINES IN WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS MAY BE, IT IS QUITE CLEAR THAT SUCH LINES OUGHT NOT TO BE MADE THE BASIS OF A BARTER OR TRADE WHEREBY A RAILROAD CORPORATION IS GIVEN RIGHTS WHICH IT OUGHT NOT TO HAVE AND WHICH ARE DANGEROUS TO THE PUBLIC WELFARE," and Mr. CARNEY knew that these words rang true.

If the forty-five Democrats who ignored their party pledges and voted for this bill had followed Mr. Carney's example the Democratic party would have little to apologize to the people for this Fall.

Hanover Fire Loss May Reach $70,000

Controlled at Four Corners Only After Menacing Entire Section.

Between $40,000 and $70,000 is the estimated loss from the fire early today, that destroyed the Hanover Four Corners railroad station, freight house, grain mill and storehouse, and was controlled only after threatening the entire section.

The fire started in the freight shed. In a few minutes the adjoining buildings and the cars were burning. When help arrived from other Hanover villages and Rockland, the Philip Bates grain elevator was on fire.

Eight other buildings were damaged by the flames, but not seriously. Hundreds of Summer visitors watched the firemen at work.

Militiaman Died of Endocarditis

Surprise caused by the report that Camille DeMadis, also known as Arthur C. Mills, a militiaman, had died of typhoid pneumonia at the Somerville Hospital, August 20, after having been vaccinated with a serum which is supposed to render persons immune from the disease, was dissipated today when the autopsy performed by Medical Examiner Leary showed that death had been caused by malignant endocarditis.

Waldo Degrades Two of Gambling Squad

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Police Commissioner Waldo stripped the shields today from two members of the "Gambling squad," Detectives John Dunn and Leo Lowenthal and suspended them from the department pending their trial on charges.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, AUGUST 23, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The Boston AMERICAN Wants the Mothers of Boston and Their Children to Have One Splendid Day in the Great Outdoors, and They Are Going to Have It

Is there a mother in the city who would not like to give her children an OUTING at the seashore during these stifling August days? Probably not. Consequently, the mothers who live in the crowded tenement districts, where the bright sunlight seldom penetrates, and where children have only hot, dusty pavements for a playground, will be doubly interested in the Boston AMERICAN'S Mothers' and Children's excursion to Nantasket Beach and return on Monday—a trip that will spread manifold blessings over hundreds of families among which pure air, wholesome sunlight and refreshing recreation are practically unknown.

It is only through the generous courtesy of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company and George A. Dodge, manager of Paragon Park, that such a magnificent excursion of tired mothers and sun-starved children is possible. The Boston AMERICAN wants the mothers of Boston and their boys and girls to have one SPLENDID DAY in the GREAT OUTDOORS, where the breezes are fresh and pure and the sunshine unclouded by the city's poisonous smoke and dust.

Monday will be a day to be later recalled through happy memories of healthful recreation and rest by the mothers and children who give themselves this day's outing as the AMERICAN'S guests. For this trip of mothers and children four special trips will be run by the splendid steamers of the Nantasket Beach line, giving an hour's invigorating sail down the harbor before arriving at the beach.

There will be FREE ADMISSION to Paragon Park and every path will lead to entertainment and fun that is really worth while—and free. All of these Summer joys for tired mothers and their children may be had by simply cutting a coupon from tomorrow's AMERICAN and adding to it 10 cents. After that is done, the day's trip and entertainment is in the hands of the AMERICAN, the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company and the management of Paragon Park.

Monday will be a great day for the mothers, but it will be a happier day for the children whose opportunities for an outing like this come but seldom.

Look for the coupon in tomorrow's AMERICAN.

If Mr. Gardner Means Business Now Is the Time to Prove It

Congressman Gardner has declared that if he is elected Governor he will oppose the control of the street railways by the steam railroads. This declaration is rather belated and is like locking the barn door after the horse is stolen.

Congressman Gardner was a citizen of Massachusetts all during the year when the vicious bill permitting the railroads to grab the trolleys was being discussed in the Legislature. A word from Mr. Gardner COULD HAVE HAD GREAT INFLUENCE on the course of legislation. After the Governor, faithful to the public interest, vetoed this bad bill, A WORD FROM MR. GARDNER probably would have frightened enough Republicans in the Legislature to have caused the Governor's veto to be sustained.

But on the Congressman's voiceless lips the heroic lay was tuneless then.

The bill was passed by the betrayal both of the Republicans and Democrats in the Legislature, and the New Haven Railroad has six months in which to accept the authority which is given it in this bill to grab the trolley lines in more than one-half the State.

But if Mr. Gardner means business, if his opposition to the monopolization of the street railways is not empty words by which to cajole votes, HE STILL HAS A CHANCE TO TAKE SOME PUBLIC AND ACTIVE MEASURES TO PREVENT THIS IMPENDING MISFORTUNE TO THE INTERESTS OF THE COMMONWEALTH. He and those associated with him can make it clear to the New Haven Railroad that IF they accept the authority extended by the Trolley Merger bill THEY ARE INVITING A WAR WHICH WILL NOT CEASE UNTIL THE NEW HAVEN MONOPOLY HAS COMPLETELY SURRENDERED AND PAID ALL THE COSTS OF THE LOSING BELLIGERENT.

It savors a little of the farcical to take sides on a question WHICH WILL BE CLOSED before he gets into office, if he should be elected. As the matter now stands, the New Haven Railroad has only by a vote of its board of directors to accept this enabling act and thus CLOSE THE QUESTION.

Does Congressman Gardner mean by his declaration against the attack upon the independence of our street railways that if he is elected Governor he will urge legislation to repeal the Trolley Merger bill?

But an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, Mr. Gardner. The AMERICAN is anxious to know what you think about its suggestions that you gather your cohorts around you and stop the New Haven from receiving these stolen goods. This is much better than attempting to take it away from them after they have got it all mixed up with their own and other people's property.

THE SONG OF JOY AND PAIN

By LILIAN LAUFERTY

O, I tasted of pleasure—and liked it,
For the flavor was sweet to my lip.
"Life is joy," then I cried, "and my sea's at full tide;
Life's a garden—each flower I'll sip."
But a sting lurked in every bright flower,
And the waves of Joy's sea broke in foam,
While the lure of gay Pleasure's fleet hour
Bore me wandering—far from my home.

Then I tasted of sorrow—'twas bitter,
And the talons of pain tore my heart.
"Life is torture," I cried. "Must I linger and bide
All my losses in Cruelty's mart?"
But a message was hid in the tangle
Of these noisome and bitter dark weeds;
From the sound of harsh bells all a-jangle
Pealed a chime for the doer of deeds.

"There's pleasure to taste, and there's sorrow—
Take from one, from the other you borrow;
Sun today may mean storm-clouds tomorrow;
All your life you must still mark the measure
Of sorrow attuned unto pleasure—
The heart that is wise still will treasure
Its joys the more dear, for its sorrow,
Its pain as a wonderful measure
Whence joy brighter radiance shall borrow."

Letters from American Readers

A TIME FOR PATRIOTISM

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The endurance of the Monroe Doctrine, so vital to America's interests and existence as a nation of any importance, is seriously endangered, and patriotism now would seem to dictate not simply silent and cowardly acquiescence in administrative actions but rather loyalty to America's national need and creed.

These are days which will at least have the value and virtue of showing our country who are its true and forceful defenders, its genuine servants and its fearless patriots—in a word, who among us are true Americans. Circumstances are about to call the muster of them.

H. S. C.

THAT MIDDLESEX SMOKE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN.

Dear Sir—I noticed your editorial of Aug. 6 in your paper, where the heading reads "There is a lot of smoke in Middlesex County and people are beginning to believe that there must be some fire."

I was glad that some paper had the backbone to speak up about this Russell case. That has been a scandal to courts and civilization. I sincerely hope the AMERICAN will continue to have the courage to speak out in plain English till those parties shall be brought to justice. Also, I hope they will be put where they belong.

Three cheers for the Boston AMERICAN.

Yours respectfully,
C. S. BRUCE.

School Hygiene—Buffalo Congress to Discuss Everything Which Can Lead to the Betterment of Conditions Surrounding Schools and Pupils.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

A GREAT congress is to be held in Buffalo, August 25 to 30. It is a congress of school hygiene. Everything is to be discussed which can lead toward the betterment of the conditions surrounding schools and pupils.

Eminent physicians and eminent instructors will be present and contribute their wisdom to the reservoir of human knowledge.

Mr. Herbert Blakesley, executive secretary, says of this congress:

"The various clubs of the city will be open to visitors. Special automobile trips will be taken through the beautiful parks of the city, ending at the Country and Park clubs, where polo and tennis exhibitions will be given. There will be special receptions at the Buffalo Club, the University Club and the Twentieth Century Club. Different societies of the city are also planning to entertain the delegates from their fatherland. There will be an exhibition of folk dancing, interspersed with music by the combined choral societies of the city. There will also be special trips to the world's great scenic wonder, Niagara Falls.

"The Women's Entertainment Committee is composed of over 100 of the leading society and club women of Buffalo. The women's committee is divided into groups representing different foreign countries and sections of our own country. There is a French, German, Italian, Russian, Polish, Scandinavian, South American, Mexican, East, West and Southern States, Scotch, Irish and English group, and the duties of these groups will be to look after the delegates from these particular localities.

2,000 Boy Scouts to Guide Visitors to the Convention

"During the congress nearly 2,000 boy scouts of Buffalo will act as guides to the visitors. Boy scouts will be stationed day and night at the railroad stations and docks to meet the visitors upon their arrival. Each boy will wear a badge indicating what foreign language he speaks, so that it will be no trouble for the delegates to make their wants known. The women's clubs will also give their services in assisting the women at the different headquarters and meeting places of the congress.

"Buffalo is aiming to make this congress a notable gathering. We recently took up a collection of $40,000 for defraying the expenses of the congress, and among those who contributed were not only the wealthiest citizens, but also the newsboys and school children. Even the children of the night schools in the poorer section of the city contributed their mite. So you see we are very deeply interested."

Dentists will talk about the care of teeth so that teachers and parents and children will learn valuable things on this very important subject.

A paper will be read on "Mouth Hygiene," and it is to be hoped that this paper will cause teachers and parents to impress upon children the great necessity of giving special attention to this part of the human machine which receives the fuel for the body. Proper care of the teeth and the use of antiseptics and aromatic washes would save many a human being from dyspepsia and innumerable other ills which flesh is not heir to, only as the individual who carries the flesh fails to do his duty, physically, mentally or morally, or all three.

One of the greatest charms a man or woman can possess is sweet breath. How many people do you know who have this charm?

School hygiene will instruct children, and perhaps grown people, how to obtain and keep this charm.

At this congress they will talk about "Sex Hygiene," a most important subject. Delicate and wise methods of instructing children on topics which are of grave importance will be discussed. It is useless to undertake to hide the facts of life and birth from children. Nature and life itself force them on their attention and awaken the youthful curiosity. Many a child has been made an invalid or a pervert for life by the blindness and silence of parents and teachers on these topics. The schools have now awakened to the necessity of formulating some system of education along these lines.

Use of Color in School Rooms Will Be Demonstrated

The "Use of Color" in the school room will be presented also by a School Commissioner who has made a study of this matter. Just as a red rag excites the anger of a bull, so different colors affect the nervous system of human beings, especially children. It is beginning to be understood that there are colors which stimulate the brain, others which cause a restful feeling, others which produce excitement, others which are mental, spiritual or militant in their influence.

It is most important, therefore, that schools should investigate this science of colors and use the knowledge to good purposes, and that parents should be induced to employ the knowledge in their homes.

A congress of this nature is one of the great moral factors in the building of a new generation. Its good effects can scarcely be imagined or conceived.

All parents of children and all teachers of children in America should be interested in making the congress a mighty success.

"Women's Work in School Hygiene" will be the subject of a special conference at the congress under the auspices of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of America. The details of the meeting are now being arranged by Mrs. S. S. Crockett of Nashville, Tenn., chairman of the Public Health Department of the General Federation.

Mrs. Frank J. Shuler of Buffalo, president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside at the women's club session. The program as now arranged by Mrs. Crockett will include the following:

Women's Work in School Hygiene Will Be Discussed

A symposium on "What Clubs of Women Can Do in School Hygiene," to be discussed by a representative school man, a leading club woman and an interested layman.

"A Story of Actual Achievement," two-minute word pictures of actual co-operation by clubwomen to be presented by representative women from many States.

"What Shall We Do About It?" Three-minute prophecies of what women's organizations will do in school hygiene before the next International Congress on School Hygiene.

Letters received by Mrs. Crockett show that the women's clubs of America are now playing a very important part in calling attention to the serious importance of the Buffalo congress. The congress is open to all interested in improving the health and efficiency of school children.

THE EMIGRANT

By MINNA IRVING

O'ER the braes and the burns, and the land of the heather,
The pipes are all droning and moaning together,
In the mist and the murk of the gray Scottish weather.
The brooks they go brawling and calling and crying,
The wind in the willow is wailing and sighing,
And whispers of woe through the alders are plying.

IN the dew-sprinkled lanes where the ivy is twining,
The young folks are silent, the old ones repining,
And tears on the pink of the wild rose are shining.
There is dust on the stile where last Sunday she tarried,
And our hearts are all gone with the big ship that carried
Our Jean to America's shores to be married.
